SLIGHT RELIEF PREDICTED AS HEAT KILLS 2

Accountant Dies After Golf Shot; Cook Is Other Victim.

THOUSANDS DESERT CITY FOR BEACHES

Hundreds Spend Night in Parks as Mercury Hits 91-Degree Mark.

The scorching heat wave claimed two lives here yesterday. While thousands of Capital residents flocked to the country and beaches and the less fortunate were seeking relief in parks, the mercury soared to 91 degrees, 8 less than on Saturday.

This despite a prosaic statement by the Weather Bureau—thermometer readings to the contrary—that summer will not be here officially until 4:28 o'clock this afternoon.

One victim of the heat wave was Benjamin G. Betz, 54 years old, of 925 M street northwest, who died suddenly yesterday after sinking a 20-foot put on the sixth hole of the golf course at East Potomac Park.

Mr. Betz, an accountant in the offices of the Shipping Board, was playing a foursome with L. J. Moody, same address; George Hammond, of 1423 Newton street northeast, and J. R. Crawford, of the La Salle Apartments, when he collapsed.

Dies Before Reaching Hospital.

Taken to Emergency Hospital in a taxicab, he was pronounced dead upon arrival. His death was attributed to the heat and an attack of acute indigestion.

Mr. Betz, employed in the Shipping Board offices since 1918, is survived by a brother and sister in Ohio. He was born in Cleveland.

The other victim was Daniel Thompson, 52 years old, colored, of 1783 U street northwest, who was fatally stricken yesterday while working in a lunchroom at 511 Second street northeast, wheer he was employed as a cook.

The official high reading for the day was 91 at 4 p. m. This was reached after the thermometer had hovered between 87 and 90 during the greater part of the day, after rising from 75 degrees, registered at 8 a. m.

Kiosk Registers 99.

The kiosk on Pennsylvania avenue near the Washington Post Building gave the temperature downtown as 99 at 4 p. m., the highest registered at that point for the day.

To the thousands who sought relief on the banks of the Potomac and in the parks, there is slight relief in sight. The Weather Bureau expects that there will be slight diminution in temperature today, which may be further relieved by gentle breezes from the northeast.

Parks were strewn last night and early today, with people "sleeping out." Many of them, in very informal clothes, slept on the grass in Potomac Park. Hundreds of cars were parked all night on the Speedway.

Sleeper Robbed of $50.

One "outdoor sleeper" paid $50 for his comfort. Instead of sleeping at home, William H. Johnson, of 531 New Jersey avenue northwest, sought relief from the heat in a vacant lot near Dingman alley northwest. When he awoke early yesterday $50 was missing from his pocket.

Officials at the Naval Observatory announced that today, known as the summer solstice, officially maks the beginning of summer, and will also be the longest day of the year.

The sun rises earlier and sets later today than on another day this year. It will be visible at 4:43 this morning and will set at 7:37 tonight.

Al Capone May Settle Suit Filed by Attorney

Miami, June 21 (A.P.).—Vincent T. Giblin, Miami attorney, said today he may have an announcement to make tomorrow regarding settlement of his $50,000 suit against Al Capone. He said he had received no communication from Capone today.

Mr. Giblin yesterday announced he expected settlement over the week-end of his suit, which sought $50,000 which, he said, was a balance due him as attorney fees. The attorney said he had received word that a representative of Capone would arrive here from Chicago to confer with him about settling the suit.

Mother Asks Police To Help Find Her Son

Police yesterday were asked to aid in locating Charles Aslin, 16 years old, who has been missing from his home at 1022½ Sixth street northeast, since last Thursday.

According to his mother, Mrs. Lenora Aslin, the youth disappeared just before dinner. He had no money, to her knowledge. Several of the boy's friends are said to have declared they heard him talking of hitch-hiking his way to New York City.

Orient Hails Moratorium As Way to Boost Silver

Shanghai, June 21 (A.P.).—President Hoover's offer of a moratorium on war debts has been received with gratification among bankers and business men here, who see in it possibilities of a trade revival which would send up the price of silver.

Ship Physician Doubts Beauty Was Murdered

Doctor, Friend of Starr Faithfull, Believes Her Letters May Clear Up Blind Period Preceding Mysterious Death.

Boston, June 21 (U.P.).—Dr. George Jameson Carr, friend of Starr Faithfull, arrived here from England today with evidence he says "will prove of great value" in solving the mystery of her death.

The evidence is contained in three letters—not two, as previously reported—written by the Greenwich Village girl to the ship's doctor and said by him to cast much light on her movements during the 72 hours between her disappearance and discovery of her body at Long Beach, N. Y.

"I hope to be able to fill the gap of that 'blind' period immediately preceding her death," Dr. Carr said. In reply to a question whether he expected his information to lead to an arrest, he said that he sincerely hoped not. He would not be surprised, he declared, if it developed that Starr committed suicide, but he would not say that in his opinion she did take her own life.

"What do you know," he was asked, "about incidents involving Starr aboard the Franconia May 20?"

"I know nothing," he replied, "except that I saw them put her off the liner. She was discovered on board without a ticket and was put off."

The physician smilingly denied he had quarreled with Starr or that he knew of any one who had quarreled with the girl. This was in reference to reports a woman acquaintance of the doctor had attacked Starr the day she was reported rebuffed by Carr.

"I first met Starr when she became a patient of mine aboard the Aurania in June, 1927," he recounted. "She was on a world cruise at the time. I had seen her three times professionally since we first met. I saw her on several other times in a non-professional way, but such meetings were infrequent because I was on world cruises much of the time and she, too, was quite a traveler. So quite often she would be abroad when I was here, and vice versa. I never went anywhere with her on shore, our meetings being exclusively aboard ships."

Dr. Carr's hands trembled slightly as he discussed the case with newspapermen, but he did not seem great-

GUNMEN SLAY RACKET PROBE AID IN CHICAGO

Killing Is Held Attempt to Embarrass Work of Grand Jury.

UNION HEAD SOUGHT FOR POLICE INQUIRY

Two New York Gangsters Are Victims; Detroiter Taken for Ride.

Chicago, June 21 (A.P.).—Jacob Kaufman, said by officials to have aided them in a grand jury investigation under way into alleged labor racketeering among motion picture operators, was shot to death early today.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Bellows immediately ordered the arrest of Thomas Maloy, head of the Chicago Motion Picture Operators Union, and five other men.

The others sought are Danny Stanton, South Side gunman under indictment in Wisconsin for the ayaling of Jack Zuta; Ralph O'Hara, an associate of Maloy; Eddie Donovan, Cicero gunman, and Jack Quinn and Ralph La Pointe, union executives.

Although he declined to disclose information he had implicating the men, Mr. Bellows described the slaying as an attempt to embarrass the grand jury's inquiry.

Killing Laid to Union.

"This is a union killing," he said. "There is no doubt about that. Maloy and his crowd have overstepped themselves this time. The murder will react against them rather than disorganize the grand jury work, as apparently it was intended to do."

Kaufman, a motion picture operator, was shot down as he stood in the entrance of a South Side radio shop by one of three gunmen who drew alongside the curb in an automobile.

The victim had long been at odds with Maloy and recently led a minority movement to unseat him in favor of Henry Gusenberg, a brother of Frank and Pete Gusenberg, who were slain in the St. Valentine's Day massacre.

The grand jury inquiry was prompted by theater owners who, according to Mr. Bellows and Assistant State's Attorney Charles E. Lounsbury, complained of "high-handed methods" employed by labor officials in forcing them to employ more motion picture operators than was necessary for operation of amusement placees.

Trade Restraint Charged.

It is charged, according to Lounsbury, that a high percentage of the salaries of the surplus operators went to Maloy himself.

The prosecutors have asked for the indictment of heads of the union, charging conspiracy in restraint of trade and violation of a city ordinance governing the licensing of operators.

Commenting on Stanton's connection with the case, both Mr. Bellows and Mrs. Lounsbury said they had information that union funds had paid for Stanton's defense in his fight to escape extradition to Wisconsin to face trial for Zuta's murder.

BERLIN ACCEPTS DEBT RELIEF; ROME, LONDON HELD WILLING; PARIS SEEKS YOUNG PLAN LINK

France Sees Conference Necessary to Work Out Details.

BUSINESS MEN HOPE FOR RENEWED SPIRIT

Ulterior Motives by U. S. Are Hinted At in Newspapers; Stress Sacrifice.

Paris, June 21 (A.P.).—It was felt in official circles here tonight the United States' move for a year's moratorium on war debts must be linked with the Young plan.

It was said President Hoover's action was appreciated in Paris for its importance and generosity. However, it is felt that any suggestion for relief from ills supposedly resulting from war debts and reparations must be made in accord with the previously mapped settlement scheme—the Young plan.

In authoritative quarters, tonight it was assumed an international conference to this end would be necessary and conversations between chancellories by regular dipomatic sources wuold be started immediately.

One difficulty in squaring any United States offer with the Young plan is foreseen in that the United States officially is not a signer of the Young pla.

French Business Men Hopeful.

French business men see a new light in Mr. Hoover's offer in that they feel it will have a saulbrious effect on business and should tend to bring about a renewed spirit.

The newspaper Echo de Paris said it had learned from a high government official the cabinet would meet on Tuesday to consider Mr. Hoover's offer, meantime awaiting further information as to its precise nature.

This official, whom the newspaper described as one particularly well qualified to express an opinion, was quoted as saying the offer of a moratorium would be received with satisfaction in France as a means of checking the economic and financial difficulties in Germany.

It was officially announced this evening that Finance Minister Pierre Etienne Flandin will "proceed with an examination of the American proposition and of the present financial situation in Germany."

It was asserted the finance minister already had held a long conference on the subject with Gov. Moret, of the Bank of France.

France to Make Sacrifice.

The first impression was that President Hoover's offer will ease the financial situation in Germany and that, while the United States is prepared to make a large sacrifice, France will be expected to make a sacrifice second only to that of the United States.

Aside from a detailed study of the Hoover proposition, however, the greatest interest lay in the fact that he was able to make the offer after consulting with political chiefs, which led to the assumption that the United States was prepared to adopt what the newspaper Le Temps called an "absolutely new policy."

Mr. Hoover's suggestion was taken to mean that Germany was to benefit by entire cessation of reparations. The part labeled unconditional re-

Elated Germany Hails Hoover Act as Heroic

Debt Plan Is Viewed as "Gift From Heaven" by Curtius.

Berlin, June 21 (A.P.).—Julius Curtius, Germany's foreign minister, in a statemept to the Associated Press today, expressed the gratitude of his whole nation at President Hoover's proposal for a one-year moratorium of intergovernmental debts.

"He has placed his finger on the sore spot," said this usually unemotional statesman, "and now comes one of those rare moments in history when all reserve should be thrown aside. I can only say that we indorse with unqualified joy the heroic declaration which President Hoover has made."

Dr. Curtius smiled broadly and gestured with animation as he described the President's offer as a "gift from heaven."

"Not only will it lighten our burdens," he said, "it will remedy the situation throughout the world. Mr. Hoover has grasped that situation with unerring instinct and has

President Hoover Leaves for Camp, Gratified by Quick Action.

HINDENBURG LETTER FORTIFIES PROPOSAL

Contents Kept Confidential; Situation Held Delicate; Mellon Parleys.

(Associated Press.)

Gratified by the response from Europe to his proposal for a one-year moratorium of intergovernmental debts, President Hoover rested over the week-end at his Rapidan camp, awaiting official action by the European governments.

Germany sent its acceptance of the proposal to Washington; Italy and Great Britain were expected to do likewise, and it was hoped France also would fall in with the others.

President Hoover went direct to President Von Hindenburg for authentic information upon the financial plight of Germany before proposing the moratorium, it was revealed yesterday. Secretary Stimson announced that a reply from the German chief executive had been received, but it was held confidential by President Hoover. He added, however, the information received corresponded to that current from other sources.

Letter Held Confidential.

Mr. Stimson's statement said:

"Since the financial situation from Germany has been under consideration, the President has been making every effort to gather information in regard to it, which should be accurate and authentic, and he recently made a request for such information from the German government, requesting that it be of the highest authority.

"He has received a response in the form of a letter to him from President von Hindenburg and considers its contents as confidential to himself. The information thus obtained corresponds to that obtained from other official and private reports and which is publicly current."

Dr. Julius Curtius, Germany's foreign minister, indorsed President Hoover's proposal "with unqualified joy." Outstanding leaders in Great Britain approved it without exception, although some of them warned that a one-year debt holiday might not bring about complete economic recovery.

Italy Held Agreeable.

Italy was represented as willing to cooperate in any undertaking which would ease the economic crisis, but in France there seemed to be a tendency to stipulate that any relief measures must be hooked up with the oung plan. The French cabinet meets early in the week to consider the President's proposal.

In the United States Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, whose name was not included in the list of those whom the President named as approving a moratorium, declined to comment at his home in Little Rock. Representative Garner, of Texas, minority leader in the House, whose name was also absent from the President's list, could not be reached.

Representative LaGuardia, Independent Republican, of New Yeork, issued a statement accusing the President of "Executive double crossing" inasmuch as he had "usurped unto himself . . . he legislative functions of the Congress."

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, said in a statement at Boise that unless reparations were readjusted and European armaments drastically reduced a moratorium "would simply postpone the day of disaster."

May Disturb World Peace.

A troubled vista of international possibilities, stretching far beyond the imediate morass of economic depression, confronts the American Government as it moves once more to the relief of Europe.

No les object than the peace of the world has ben touched by the apprehensions of American and European statesmen as they reckoned up the consequences of the present tangle of financial obligations growing out of the great war. Every foreign office

EUROPE WELCOMES HOOVER DEBTS PLAN

Sees Relief in Moratorium; Mellon Viewed as Envoy; British Hopeful.

London, June 21 (A.P.).—Europe today welcomed possible relief from her economic burdens through the plan of President Hoover to postpone for a year payments of intergovernmental debts and World War reparations.

Tomorrow her unemployed are expected to seek jobs with a new hope and her governments will turn to the task of solving their pressing financial and industrial problems with renewed zeal.

The outline of President Hoover's program for helping Europe in order to help the United States out of her own economic slump has been received in most European capitals as a life-saving stimulant just at a moment when it was feared the entire continent was headed for a crisis almost as serious as that created by the World War itself.

Mr. Hoover's picture was in newspapers today, as it was during the Belgian relief days, and Germany voiced the sentiment of other nations in heralding the American Executive as a benefactor of the world.

The French opinion, however, sounded somewhat of a dissenting note. The swift-moving events of the last ten days appeared to have failed to convince the Paris press, as the Washington and London governments have been convinced, that the threat of a German economic catastrophe was altogether real.

The full significance of the American policy in regard to the war debts and its effect on the European economic situation can not be adjudged immediately, it was pointed out by observers. They added, however, that its strengthening effect already has been shown on the Berlin Bourse and the stock exchange in London, and in other cities will be watched closely tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the chief actors in this world drama, President Hoover, Heinrich Bruening, German chancellor; Ramsay MacDonald, British prime minister, and Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, today had an opportunity to gauge the first results of their work from widely separated points.

Mr. Mellon spent the day with members of his family in the Old World university town of Cambridge,

REACTION OF FRANCE WAITED BY GERMANY

Hindenburg Plea to U. S. Held Made at Suggestion of Sackett.

Berlin, June 21 (U.P.).—The German nation—from cabinet minister to the humble citizen—rejoiced today in the proposal of President Hoover for a suspension of war debt payments, but there was tension in government circles as the reaction of other nations, especially France, was awaited.

Simultaneously, it was made known in government sources that the cabinet would drop its plan for a three-year moratorium on reparations if the Hoover plan is accepted, but that it would not abandon its principle of working toward a downward revision of the Young plan payments.

The foreign minister, Dr. Julius Curtius, announced that the government, through its embassy in Washington, officially had accepted the plan "which Germany receives gratefully and joyfully."

President Paul von Hindenburg, from his summer residence at Heidedeck, in West Prussia, had cabled to Mr. Hoover Saturday night, appealing to the United States "to aid Germany in its despair."

The excitemen in Germany mounted to a high pitch tonight spreading to the streets, cafes, public conveyances and homes throughout the nation. The name of President Hoover was on the lips of tens of thousands of Germans, many of whom hailed him as a "savior."

Dispatches from Washington were read with excitemen and there was a spirit of holiday throught the capital, even members of the government being unable to conceal their joy.

At the United States embassy Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett and his staff were non-commital, spending all day in preparing a report to the state department.

The government, forgetting temporarily its original plea for a three-year moratorium, held that the proposed plan would permit a "breathing space" for Europe, in which economic recovery could be started and arrangements for revision of the Young plan payments (under which Germany paid out a total of $385,574,000 in the last year) could be launched.

Plans of Germany for a general conference on revision would not be dropped, it was emphasized, but a year's suspension of payments would greatly strengthen the cabinet of

DRIVER DIES, 4 HURT, AS AUTO HITS POLE

Lindell Cones Meets Death Trying to Pass Car on Way to Beach.

One man was instantly killed and four other persons riding with him in a small roadster were slightly injured yesterday when the driver lost control of the machine and it crashed a telephone pole on the Washington Boulevard 150 feet north of the turnoff to North Beach.

Lindell Cones, 20 years old, of 836 E street southwest, suffered a fractured skull and a severed jugular vein in the crash. He was dead when taken from the wreckage.

The injured are:

Ward Brooker, 24 years old, of 653 E street southwest, taken to Calvert County Hospital, Prince Frederick, Md., suffering from bruises and shock.

Miss Ruth Dunn, 19 years old, of 2307 Third street northeast, bruises and shock; treated by a private physician.

Anderson Parker, 29 years old, of 636 E street southwest, cuts and bruises; treated by a private physician.

Clarence Russner, of an Eighth street northwest address, cuts and bruises; treated by a private physician.

The party had left Washington yesterday after dinner for the beach. As the car, driven by Cones, neared the turnoff, witnesses said, Cones attempted to pass another machine driven by Frank H. Gearge, jr., of 3825 Thirteenth street northwest, who was riding with his wife and two small children. All members of the George family escaped injury.

The car driven by Cones apparently grazed the bumper of the other machine and was swerved from its course. The driver was unable to regain control of the machine and it careened across a ditch about four feet deep and crashed the telephone pole, overturning.

Cones was pulled from the machine by John O'Neill, of Chesapeake Beach, Md., and Dr. J. W. Bonbrest, of 2727 Woodly place northwest, and several others who were near thescene of the crash.

Meanwhile James E. Talbert and seevral other residents of Chesapeake Beach made preparations to rush Brooker to the Calvert County Hospital.

Arthur W. Dowell, State's attorney of Calvert County, was called and held an inquest over the body of Jones. He returned a verdict terming the accident unavoidable and the body was removed to a Washington undertaking establishment.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed, but the body will be sent to Suffolk, Va., for interment.

6 DIE IN VERA CRUZ CLASH OVER CHURCH

Three Police Reported Victims of Riot at Burial of Slain Priest.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, June 21 (A.P.).—Reports from the town of Huatusco in the State of Vera Cruz said that six persons, including the chief of police and two other policemen, were killed last night in a clash between police and Catholics in connection with the burial of the slain priest, Jose De Jesus Cano. The priest was ambushed and fatally wounded a few days ago as he was returning to his parish after visiting a sick person.

A number of persons also were injured in the disturbance. According to reports, a crowd of 800 persons were attending the funeral when a shout was raised of "Viva Cristo Rey!" (Long Live Christ the King). Police then interfered and the encounter followed.

The religious troubles in Vera Cruz have their root in agitation against a measure passed by the Legislature last week which would limit the number of Catholic priests in the state to 1 for every 100,000 inhabitants. It would leave the City of Vera Cruz with only one priest and the whole state with less than ten.

Catholics throughout Mexico have protested the bill and the Governor of Vera Cruz has been called to Mexico City to confer with the president.

Yesterday was the second anniversary of the signing of an agreement between the church and the Mexican state settling the long-standing differences which, frequently have resulted in serious violence. In a statement marking the anniversary Archbishop Ruiz y Flores, apostolic delegate to Mexico, asserted Saturday that neither the Mexican government nor the heads of the church had any complaint against each other regarding the carrying out of the agreement, but that in some states the agreement had not been respected. One of these states is Vera Cruz.

Dozen Hurt as Cuban Police Fire on Idle

Bayamo, Cuba, June 21 (A.P.).—About a dozen persons were injured early today when police and soldiers fired on unemployed demonstrations outside a hall where city officials and other political figures were holding a banquet.

Officials at the function included Quintin George, popular party senator, and Mayor Clemente Perez. They were reported to have fired pistols into the air in an effort to disperse the crowd of several hundred which had shouted demands for food and work. Failing, they called police.

Teacher Dies in Fall To Save Life of Child

Body Drops 60 Feet to Jagged Rocks, but Small Girl Pushed From Brink Lands in Sand Pit Unhurt.

Lenoir, N. C., June 21 (A.P.).—Lillian Arheigar, 21-year-old Charlotte school teacher, died tonight of injuries suffered yesterday in a fall over a 60-foot cliff in attempting to save a small girl from the same fall.

The young teacher landed on jagged rocks and never regained consciousness.

She saved the child's life with a push as both went over the cliff. The shove sent the child clear of the rocks to fall in a soft sandpit and she was not injured.

The incident occurred at Glen Bernie Falls, near Blowing Rock. The child, spending her vacation at a summer camp, and Miss Arheigar were visiting the falls.

The little girl, whose name was withheld by camp authorities, slipped at the brink of the cliff. Miss Arheigar leaped after her, but was unable to pull her back and went over the cliff herself.

Miss Arheigar was the daughter of S. W. Arheigar, of Fredericksburg, Tex. She attended the University of Texas and North Carolina College for Women.

Her body was taken to Charlotte and later will be sent to Texas.

Poison Picnic Sandwiches Kill 2 Girls; 3 Adults Ill

Powder Capsules in Chicken Prepared by Mother, First Identified as Quinine, Take Sisters' Lives; Father One of Sick.

Lebanon, Ind., June 21 (A.P.).—Poison capsules placed in chicken sandwiches served at a family reunion here today caused deaths of two girls and resulted in critical illness of three other persons. Presence of the poison was unexplained tonight.

The dead are:

Alice Jean Simmons, age 10, of near Greenfield, Ind.

Virginia Simmons, 14, sister of Alice Jean.

Those ill are John Simmons, 48, father of the two girls; Lester Carr, and Horace N. Jackson, 55, all of near Greenfield.

The sandwiches were prepared by Mrs. John Simmons, mother of the girls, at their home near Greenfield, and carried in the rear of the family automobile to the reunion in a park here. They were placed with other food on a long table, where those attending the reunion served themselves.

From one of the first sandwiches lifted from the plate, a capsule filled with fine white powder fell. It was taken to a local physician who expressed opinion the capsule contained quinine.

By the time this report was returned to the park, several of the sand-

Pierce De L. Bosa, of Boalsburg, Pa., has been appointed by Secretary Stimson, chief of the State Department's Western European division.

Girl Star of Play Scorned By Broadway Tries to Die

Despondency Over Unfavorable Reception Accorded "Thais," Which She Also Directed, Blamed for Suicide Attempts by Dorothy Deer Horn.

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—Dorothy Deer Horn, 22-year-old star and director of the play "Thais," which had its Broadway premiere Thursday, was taken to a hospital today in a critical condition. Her roommate, Miss Schiffer, said the actress had taken poison in a fit of despondency over the unfavorable reception accorded the show by critics.

Miss Schiffer said Miss Horn had also had trouble with stage hands and had been so unnerved by the discouraging reaction of yesterday's audience she took sedatives at the conclusion of last night's performance.

The actress told a physician who treated her late last night that she had taken the sedative to ease a headache, but later, Miss Schiffer said, admitted she had taken it with suicidal intent.

Under the doctor's care her condition improved. But at noon today she became violently ill and confided to her roommate she had taken several poison tablets this morning, Miss Schiffer said.

Despite her youth, Miss Horn had been identified with repertoire companies for years. She was born in Princeton, N. J., the daughter of Leona Deer Horn Matche Weaver, a concert singer. She is a great-granddaughter of Chief Jim Weaver, said

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

around the globe is asking itself what ultimate effect, in the transcendent field of international peace and politics, will flow from President Hoover's plan for a war debt reparations moratorium.

Recently new elements of disturbance have been added to the European turmoil which succeeded the peace of Versailles. National sensibilities have ben troubled by the proposal for an Austro-German customs union, by the industrial advance of Russia, by the mountaing aspirations of the Italy of Mussolini, by the military preparations of France and by a dozen other cross currents of European politics. Suspicion and speculation vex the neighborly relations of peoples and governments.

Issue Assurance to France.

When ranking statesmen of Germany recnetly talked htings over with British officials in London they found it expedient to go to the length of issuing a formal public statement affirming that the discussions were "not directed against France."

It is agreed universally that the problem of war debts and reparations has been a constant irritant on the surface of an international relationship already racked by the pains of misunderstanding and fear. Whether such a situation was inevitable or whether it was produced by designing politicians who sought to stir agitation for their own purposes, the result is plain.

In approaching this situation at all President Hoover and his advisers have been aware of its extreme delicacy. American diplomats abroad have cautioned them of the unexpected consequences which might be set in motion by any well-intended but ill-considered word or deed. That they weighed most carefully the effects above and beyond economic considerations is shown by Mr. Hoover's statement of Saturday that the American Government was seeking to forward both "political peace and economic stability."

U. S. Hopes to Serve Peace.

Broadly, the American hope that peace has been served by the moratorium proposal rests on three suppositions, the correctness of which only time can demonstrate. They are:

That an easement of reparations payments will stabilize conditions in Germany, strengthening the hand of a government which has been threatened with overthrow and averting an outbreak of violence which might spread across international boundaries.

That a debt holiday all round will soften the tension between Germany and her neighbors, who are her creditors, and perhaps remove one element of nervousness in relations among those creditors themselves.

That as a diplomatic gesture, the concessions made by the United States in the matter of war debt payments will add force to the American plea for a real reduction in armaments.

Denies Effort to Make Trade.

This latter subject was mentioned directly in Mr. Hoover's statement, although he disavowed any connection between his proposal and the disarmament conference to be held next February. He said, in effect, that the United State was not seeking to make a trade on this point, as has been suggested by some, by demanding that armaments be reduced before war debt payments were eased; but he added a hope that by making the concession beforehand, Washington would be in a better position to present its "good will" plea hereafter.

The comparative suddenness of the President's decision to act has caused much surprise and speculation in official and diplomatic Washington. Some diplomatic preparation was made through communications with the interested foreign governments, but even Mr. Hoover himself did not expect developments to follow one another so rapidly. The real cause probably will remain a mystery, but certain interesting facts are easily discernible.

It was on June 6 that the German government issued its manifesto declaring the reparations load had become "unbearable." The news was given Mr. Hoover at his Rapidan camp and was received with interest, but without apparent positive reaction.

No Hint Made on Trip.

For nearly two weeks matters drifted with no outward developments. The President went on his Western trip, and made a speech at Indianapolis discussing in great detail the domestic and world aspects of the depression. He dropped no hint whatever that international action was contemplated.

But while his train was coming back to Washington last Thursday something happened. He requested that his return be hastened, and he arrived here an hour ahead of schedule.

Almost at once he plunged ito conferences with the congressional leaders and astonished them by laying down a plan of quick and definite action.

At midafternoon, after two days of conferences, he told inquirers that he was ready to act as quickly as one further detail could be cleared away. He might be able to make a statement, he said, by Sunday noon, and would remain in Washington over the week-end. About an hour later the White House announced that the statement would be ready about 6 p. m. and that immediately thereafter the President would leave for the Rapidan.

No Difficulty in Guessing.

What happened? Washington has had no difficulty in guessing, although its guess may be only half the truth.

On June 17, the day before the President's hurried return to the Capital, the exceptionally quiet but exceptionally active Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury through all of the troubled years of debt refunding and reparation fixing, called on the British premier and other statesmen in London. Yesterday Mr. Mellon still was in England, "visiting relatives," some 3,000 miles away by boat, but very much nearer by telephone.

Pedhaps Washington may be misjudging this situation, biased by the fact that it knows Mr. Mellon so well and has had so many demonstrations of Mr. Hoover's confidence in him. But is has its own very definite ideas. Mr. Mellon is no trained diplomat, mincing words and obscuring his meaning with language. He is a banker and industrialist, with years of practical accomplishment behind him, and where he is things happen.

Condition of Keezel Still Is Held Serious

LAGUARDIA ASSAILS HOOVER OVER DEBT

Sees Action by President as "Blow Below Belt;" Holds Ratification Sure.

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia, (Independent Republican) of New York, in a statement today, declared President Hoover's proposal to postpone payment of foreign debts for one year was "executive double-crossing."

The statement said Congress was "hit below the belt" by the offer and the President had "usurped unto himself * * * the legislative functions of Congress," since, "in our day national expression is authoritative only when the representatives of the people have taken proper action."

Representative LaGuardia's statement follows, in part:

"The President of the United States having made an official offer to the nations of the world, Congress will ratify that promise by enactment of necessary legislation.

Is Duty of Congress.

"It is only fair to say, however, that sejdom has the American Congress been subjected to such executive double-crossing. The deferment of debt payments, like any fiscal matter under our form of government, is a legislative function of the highest degree.

"The President admits his proposal requires congressional action. That being so, he had no right to pledge the American people before proper congressional action had been taken. By so doing he hit Congress below the belt and usurped unto himself not only the legislative functions of Congress but attempts to make personal, like in the old food administration days, a matter which is purely national.

"In our democracy, national expression is authoritative only when the representatives of the people have taken proper action. The fact that a few members of the House and Senate were in a sort of way consulted does not meet constitutional requirements. * * *

Congress Will Serve Notice.

"With the exception of Senators Borah, of Idaho, and Wagner, of New York, there was not a Progressive consulted. The President gathered unto him a group of Republican 'yes men' to satisfy this constitutional conscience. * * *

"Foreign governments will no doubt adjust themselves to the President's offer and Congress will not victimize them because of our presidential foibles. But Congress will surely take most drastic action not only to alleviate domestic conditions and eliminate future bread lines, but also to give expression as a notice that hereafter foreign debt policies, as all fiscal matters, must come from the proper constituted constitutional authorities."

Borah Sees Arms Cut as Also Needed

Says Moratorium Alone Would Merely Postpone Disaster.

Boise, Idaho, June 21 (A.P.).—The Idaho's Statesman, in a copyrighted story, quotes Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, as saying unless armaments in Europe are drastically reduced and reparations readjusted, a moratorium "would simply postpone the day of disaster." He is stated to have said:

"It has been clear to me from the beginning that Germany could not pay the reparations assessed against her. They will have to be readjusted. If a moratorium is granted it will give time to see the situation as it is and time to adjust matters.

"I feel that the moratorium ought to be limited to one year. If within that time armaments are drastically reduced and reparations readjusted, recovery might well follow. But without disarmament and without readjustment of reparations, moratoriums simply postpone the day of disaster. Moratoriums are all right, but these other things must follow before there can be anything but temporary relief in Europe.

"I am not overlooking the necessity for revision of the peace treaties, but that will take time. Europe is not ready for that, but it will have to come."

police department's list of gangsters today. They were those of John Soricelli, 31, known to the authorities as a driver for Dutch Schultz, Bronx beer baron, and Charlie Liebman, a former aide of Frankie Uale (Yale).

Soricelli, shot twice at his tenement home, died in a hospital. Liebman's body, with two bullets an inch apart behind his right ear, was sprawled across a lonely road near Col Spring, a few miles up the Hudson River.

Rival Gangsters Blamed.

Rival gangsters did both shootings, detectives said.

Daniel Iamascia, bodyguard to Schultz, was shot fatally Thursday in an encounter with two detectives. Schultz whose true name is Arthur Flegenheimer, was subsequently arrested and held until yesterday, when he was released in $75,000 temporary bail on three indictments accusing him of felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan law in carrying concealed weapons.

Both of the bullets which struck Soricelli passed through his body. Taken to a hospital, he said to questioning police: "Don't bother me, I'm dying." He died an hour later.

Soricelli apparently was taken unawares, police said, since he left two revolvers in a coat pocket in his bedroom when he went to the door. His wife refused to discuss the shooting.

Detroit Rumrunner Slain.

Detroit, une 21 (A.P.).—The body of Ben Bronston, 26, known to police as a rumrunner and a former Purple gangster, was found in the middle of a boulevard in the northwest section of Detroit early today.

Bronston had been shot through the head and abdomen. Police found no one in the neighborhood who heard shots and reasoned that the man was killed elsewhere.

Bronston's police record shows numerous arrests and reveals thut he was a gangster at the age of 18. The killing was the first of the type here in several weeks.

Debt Plan Success May Fix Hoover's Political Destiny

Observers Believe President's Bold Proposal for European Moratorium Likely to Have Important Bearing on Outcome of 1932 Campaign.

(United Press.)

President Hoover's proposal for a moratorium on allied debts and German reparations payments was viewed here yesterday as a move which may have a decisive bearing on the outcome of the 1932 presidential campaign.

While it is assumed the President's primary motive is a desire to alleviate the world-wide economic depression and stabilize conditions in Europe, those who think in terms of domestic political affairs feel that that aspect of the proposal can not be overlooked.

For many months Democratic strategy has been based upon the allegation that the present administration has done nothing worthy of note. The alleged unhappy fate of the farm-relief program, the much-controverted results of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act, the growth of unemployment, have all been cited as evidences that the Hoover administration was incapable of grappling with important issues. The air has been filled with Democratic sarcasm about Mr. Hoover's promises of continued prosperity and abolition of the poor house during the 1928 campaign.

Now, by one bold stroke, Mr. Hoover has staked his political future, in the view of many observers, upon the possibility of stabilizing economic conditions and restoring a measure of prosperity within the next fiscal year. If his proposal is accepted and there is a revival of business, there are some well-informed political leaders who believe his renomination and reelection in 1932 will be assured.

Even the dates mentioned by the President are considered significant. He suggested the moratorium be effective for one year from July 1. If that course is followed, the year will be just drawing to a close when the Republicans meet in national convention next year to nominate their presidential candidate.

An atmosphere of restored business confidence, rising prices and wages, and decreasing unemployment at the time the convention meets would put Mr. Hoover in a position where his friends could set up the claim that he had broken the depression and restored prosperity.

There is, however, another aspect to be considered. If Mr. Hoover's proposal should be accepted and prove ineffective in relieving the depression, then his opponents would be able to harp on the fact the Government has been deprived of about one-quarter of a billion dollars in debt payments due during the year and that there had been no commensurate benefit from this sacrifice.

The potential political effects of the project cut across party lines inasmuch as Owen D. Young, considered a possible Democratic presidential aspirant, has given his approval of the Hoover suggestion. Thus Young's political stock will rise or fall in his party much the same as will Mr. Hoover's among the Republicans.

The vigorous language employed by Mr. Hoover in announcing his proposal is taken as evidence he realized all the tremendous potentialities involved. He might have contented himself with a declaration of willingness to have the United States participate in a conference to consider debts and reparations, but he chose instead to take a bold course.

"The American Government proposes" was the phrase he used, a tone reminiscent of Woodrow Wilson at Versailles or the vigorous language of Theodore Roosevelt.

By his foresight in obtaining approval from numerous Democratic senators and representatives, as well as some of the progressive group, Mr. Hoover has protected the administration against congressional hasing during the next session. However, as things go in politics that will be no insurance against criticism later if the plan should not be successful.

GERMANY OFFICIALLY ADOPTS HOOVER'S SETTLEMENT PLAN

Chancellor Henrich Bruening, threatened with overthrow by the Fascist party.

Government circles believed it would be about two weeks before general reaction to the proposal has been clarified. During that time there remains the possibility of further unfavorable reaction against the German financial situation. It was said that if the run on German credit persists at the rate of the last few days the most prompt acceptance of the Hoover plan would be necessary to avert difficulties.

Thus the problem, having found in the United States' proposals the answer to "how" the crisis might be solved, becomes a question of "when" the solution will become effective.

Dr. Curtius, in announcing acceptance of the proposal, said that should Mr. Hoover's plan fail to materialize and achieve speedy relief for Germany, the nation could still resort to the moratorium under the Young plan, previously set for July. It was believed by the government, however, that the Hoover plan would be satisfactory.

If the plan is put into effect the German financial burden will be reduced by approximately $400,000,000 for the year beginning July 1, but the government would benefit only to the extent of about $201,600,000, as the remainder would go to the railroads because of their share in reparations payments.

The German impression is that the Hoover plan involves a suspension of both conditional and unconditional payments under the Young plan.

Cabinet in Session.

The cabinet has been studying the situation feverishly, sitting until late Saturday night and resuming sessions again today. It was understood that Ambassador Sackett had conveyed to Chancellor Bruening a suggestion—originating in Washington—that President von Hindenburg send the message dispatched last night to the people of the United States, through President Hoover. The purpose of the message would be to place the authority and prestige of the German President behind the movement for alleviation of Germany's plight.

Although the financial situation was described as remaining acute, the despondency of the last two weeks was swept away by the developments of the last 48 hours. One high government official, who a week ago said the world was in urgent need of leadership, and "Mr. Hoover is the man to assume the role," today exclaimed: "Our cry for leadership has been heard."

Another minister said Mr. Hoover's move was "an historical act of courage and human brotherhood."

Must Make Decisions.

The Berliner Tageblatt said: "Several European creditor and debtor nations must make decisions as revolutionary as those the United States has just made, with the perseverance and courage for objectivity to which America owes her greatness."

"The last 48 hours have been the most eventful in history since the empire asked for an armistice in 1918," said Vorwaerts. "Mr. Hoover's act strengthened optimism in the United States and reduced pessimism in Germany. The soundness of the action is guaranteed because it is not only based on moral considerations, but is prompted by economic considerations. Viewed from the political angle the action is a satire on Pan-Europa and M. Briand's famous memorandum, proving Europe is unable to did itself. Europe's diplomats can only make futile speeches."

The Nationalist party Deutsche Zeitung said the plan "aims at postponement of the necessary revision of the Young plan. Mr. Hoover's action is only a makeshift which will prove costly for Germany."

Silver Stabilization Is Seen As Opening New Trade Area

Peaceful, Industrious China With Sound Credits Pictured as Boon to America if Metal Price Is Raised.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the final story of the series on the silver question, written by Alexander R. George, member of the Washington staff of the Associated Press, presenting the many phases and background of the situation.

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE.

(Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Press.)

Virtually every American advocate of silver stabilization emphasized the benefit to be derived by the United States from the economic rehabilitation of China.

A peaceful, industrious China with stable credits is pictured as a market of tremendous value, a boon not only to the lumber and kerosene exporter, but to the wheat farmer, cotton grower and the factory worker as well. Conversely, a depressed China, its buying capacity crippled, is seen as a menace to American economic well-being.

An Orient with its yardstick, silver, at a reasonable exchange value is depicted as the greatest potential customer of a high geared industrial machine which is alleged to have saturated the American home market.

Work Needed to Avert War.

Business men familiar with conditions in China say its great need, along with peace and money, is an adequate internal transportation system.

Some have suggested that the United States, either by itself or with other powers, finance the building of highways in China and oversee the work to insure that funds are expended for the loan and that new revenues are allotted for repayment of the loan.

The Senate committee, which investigated the conditions of American commerce with China, concluded that "there must be work provided in China or there will be war. The people through lack of work are compelled to fight in armies in order to get food. Many of them feel they have to loot to live."

Building highways is advocated to give work to multitudes of Chinese, including those now in the armies of the various war lords and others who have no means of livelihood.

Would Open New Market.

This, it is claimed, also would make a market for quantities of road construction machinery and materials. Completion of the highway system would be followed, it is said, by an enormous demand for motor vehicles, accessories and fuel which, in turn, would make it possible to bring out products of various kinds from the interior of China.

Some exporters have expressed the opinion that a stabilized China would consume the entire wheat surplus of the United States. On the other hand, an impoverished Orient, higher-priced silver advocates contend, has a marked depressing effect on agriculture in the United States.

Very low wheat in India, they say, means lower wheat in the United States and Argentina. Indian wheat is considered inferior to Canadian or American wheat, but it is bought when obtainable at a price sufficiently low enough to offset its relatively poor quality.

Depression in the Orient is likewise described as adversely affecting the cotton grower in this country. When India or China cuts down its purchases, the textile industry buys less cotton and the Southern farmer buys less silk from Japan. And so the depression spreads in growing circles.

HOOVER DEBTS PLAN WELCOMED ABROAD

where his son will be graduated tomorrow.

Last night the American secretary had a long telephone talk with President Hoover, and his role in the present negotiations was interpreted here as that of the President's personal envoy. By his close contact with British officials and with Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England, during the past few days he was believed to have made a survey of the European situation before giving Mr. Hoover final advice, which enabled the President to launch his moratorium scheme.

Mr. Mellon will return to London tomorrow night and the coming week is expected to see a renewal of his conversations with Downing street officials.

"Naturally I know all about it," the American Secretary said at Cambridge today, "but I can not discuss the terms."

Situation Is Delicate.

"The situation is a delicate one and everything that is to be said from the American side must come first from America. A statement by me might be misrepresented or misunderstood over there and might be prejudicial to the negotiations. However, I have been able to do something, but I can not tell you in what direction."

An official British pronouncement on the American plan will be forthcoming from Mr. MacDonald in the House of Commons tomorrow. Meanwhile, expression of British opinion is voluble and varied. The general tone is highly favorable to the American move.

Some sections of the press hearld Mr. Hoover's action as a breakdown of America's policy of "splendid isolation," and there also was a tendency to rush ahead of the Hoover plan and to take for granted complete revision of the United State's basic policy on European war debts.

Many comments warned Europeans that there was no sentiment whatever behind Hoover's decision and no humanitarian impulse, but a mere sound business sense which realized that the United States' industrial hecovery can not take place until Europe also recovers in some quarters.

British Leaders Sound Warning.

British statesmen and financiers have approved, without exception, President Hoover's offer of a debt moratorium, but there is in the attitude of many of them a note of warning that a one-year suspension of payments will not work the magic of lifting the world completely out of its economic difficulties.

Actually Great Britain takes a financial loss in accepting a moratorium, for in the present state of operation of debt payments this country would have received $165,750,000 while paying to the United States only $165,000,000. This would have left a surplus of $1,750,000 which could have been placed against the British payments to the United States in past years before her reparations and debt payments began to flow in from the continent.

Comment by British leaders also emphasized that vast American loans and investments in Germany would be jeopardized by an economic collapse in that country.

Lloyd George Is Hopeful.

David Lloyd George, Liberal leader, said:

"The President's move will contribute materially to relieve the economic strain. Had an all-round cancellation of debts taken place in 1922 when my government proposed it to the United States and France the world would have recovered much more rapidly."

Lord Brentford, former home minister: "It's the best news I've had for many years."

Walter Runciman, former president of the board of trade: "It is the most hopeful statement made by any ruler for the past ten years."

Sir Herbert Austin, automobile manufacturer: "The step will bring the greatest possible credit to the United States, but a three-year suspension would be more effective and the minimum necessary to give time for the recovery to normal conditions."

Cancellation Is Favored.

E. F. Wise, extreme Laborite member of the Interallied Debts Council: "A one-year moratorium will give us a breathing space, but it is essential that the debts be canceled."

W. M. Cintrine, secretary of the Trades Union Congress: "A one-year suspension will help to surmount the immediate difficulties, but I doubt very much whether the end of the year will see the situation materially improved. Sooner or later an all-around reduction, or even cancellation of war debts must be faced. Payment of interest is the real millstone around Great Britain's neck."

Lord Rothermere, newspaper publisher: "The President's gesture is a good tonic for the harassed world. Confirmation by the Congress, in view of the imminence of the presidential election and the strength of the Democratic party remains doubtful."

ly disturbed by any of their questions.

"Hod did Starr appeal to you?" he was asked.

"You mean from the viewpoint of a doctor?" he smiled.

"No."

"Well, she was a beautiful girl," he paused. "That's the first thing any one would say about her. I think. She was striking. She was an intelligent girl. She was alert of mind."

Dr. Carr would not say if he ever had been in love with the Greenwich Village beauty.

"It has been reported that she was madly in love with you," some one suggested. "Did you know that?"

"What do you mean, madly?" he countered.

"Well, did you know she was in love with you?"

He smiled again. "One can only surmise."

"Did you discourage Starr's attentions?"

"I wouldn't want to say as to that."

"Did you ever receive any gifts from Starr?"

"No," he replied, after long thought, "I didn't."

"Did you ever make any gifts to her?"

"No. You know, I'm a Scotsman," he smiled.

Cable From Hindenburg Crossed U. S. Proposal

(United Press.)

President Hoover's proposal for a one-year moratorium on reparations and war debts crossed wires with the cablegram from President von Hindenburg of Germany, telling frankly of Germany's financial condition, it was indicated last night.

It was understood that the German communication arrived after the President's departure for Rapidan Saturday night, and that it was taken there yesterday by Walter Newton, the President's secretary.

North Carolinian Once Was Sentenced to Electric Chair.

Boydton, Va., June 21 (A.P.).—A Greenville County jury last night convicted Garland Smith, of the murder of Deputy Sheriff Bernard Puryear and fixed his punishment at 20 years in the penitentiary. Judge N. S. Turnbull immediately passed sentence.

At a previous trial Smith was convicted of the charge and sentenced to die in the electric chair, but was saved when the Supreme Court of Appeals granted him a new trial.

The jury returned the verdict an hour and 35 minutes after retiring.

FRANCE WANTS YOUNG PLAN DEBT HOLIDAY

parations under the Young plan, it was taken for granted, must be eased as well as the conditional—earmarked for war debt payments to the United States.

If Germany were only to cease conditional payments, under the Hoover offer, it was assumed that France's interest would not be seriously engaged. However, the postponing of unconditional payments—earmarked by the Young plan for payment of actual war devastation—would mean a real sacrifice on France's part and it was understood it would require careful study before any action is taken.

Modifies Young Plan.

Le Temps summed up the situation as follows:

"If there is no error in the terms, the Hoover offer signified suspension during the year of conditional and unconditional portions of reparations and, as a counterpart, a year's suspension of war debt payments between the allies.

"Hoover's offer then is a profound modification of the Young plan which does not foresee a complete reparations moratorium. It would mean a $240,000,000 annual sacrifice by the United States and a $100,000,000 one by France."

Several newspapers attributed Mr. Hoover's proposal to his interest in heavy loans by American banks to Germany.

"The Americans are deeply interested in preventing a financial collapse of Germany in order to save important capital engaged," Le Temps declared. "There also are far repercussion in America of the irremediable European crisis.

Emphasizes U. S. Interest.

"That undoubtedly determined the Washington government to modify its policy."

The Journal des Debats emphasized the American interest in Germany's financial stability.

"Americans have for several years made big loans to Germany, which encouraged prodigality in state and private enterprises and contributed largely to the present financial and economic crisis," this newspaper declared.

Le Temps asserted that Hoover's expression of hope and good will toward disarmament "ought to be listened to in Berlin, for it is there that obstacles are raised to reasonable limitation of armaments, which takes into consideration each nation's security."

La Liberte expressed the fear that "it will be France again which will pay the bill of the reconciliation banquet."

When the boy arived at the station he could give no information about himself whatsoever. Through the efforts of the Travelers Aid, friends of the boy were located at 726 Thirteenth street northeast and he was sent there to await his grandfather. Grandfather understood, from a wire received from the boy's parents in Chicago, that he was to meet the boy at Boyds, Md., but something went wrong.

ELECTIONS IN SPAIN STIR WIDE INTEREST

9,000 Certify Themselves as Candidates as Balloting Draws Near.

Madrid, June 21 (A.P.).—While more than 9,000 certified themselves as deputy candidates by going before election boards throughout Spain today, the country entered the final week of an intensive political campaign to elect 470 members of a constituent assembly next Sunday.

Hundreds of political rallies were held with most of the cabinet ministers electioneering in behalf of their candidacies. President Niceto Alcala Zamora made a campaign speech at Jaen.

Despite the announcement of extreme lefts, or syndicalists, and extreme rights, or monarchists, that they would abstain from participating in the election, the campaign is arousing great interest. Many observers are predicting a victory for the republican socialist coalition, representing the present administration. It has not been determined whether the extreme lefts would attempt to carry out a reported scheme to create strikes to embarrass the government but efforts have been made to check any such move.

Seville Reds Jeered.

In Seville a group ran through the streets today shouting for communism. The public jeered them and the procession was stopped.

The withdrawal of Melquiades Alvarez, prominent monarchist, and his friends from the race, caused a sensation today. The withdrawal followed disorders in Oviedo Friday in which several persons were injured just as Melquiades Alverez was about to make a political speech.

Meanwhile the government is still worried by the general economic depression as well as by the fluctuation of the peseta.

Gov. Julio Carabias of the Bank of Spain has returned from Paris, where he negotiated two credits, one for $15,000,000 and the other for $30,000,000.

Bus Driver Lynched.

At Seville, milk drivers went on strike today and coachmen and other workers announced they would quit their posts tomorrow.

Alvaro Albernoz, minister of public works, today addressed a large meeting at Valencia, urging an early separation of church and state.

A dispatch from the town of Sahtacalalla said that an infuriated mob today lynched the driver of a motor bus, who had driven his machine into a street crowd, killing 2 persons; 70 were injured by the bus and in subsequent disturbances, 15 of them seriously.

The crowd had gathered to welcome Republican speakers at a campaign rally when the vehicle crashed into them.

HOOVER HELD HERO BY JOYFUL BERLIN

solution of the world crisis. What I admire particularly is the President's realization that what is needed now more than anything else is restoration of confidence.

"I don't care what people say about lower prices and such,—like economic factors—at the bottom of it all is lack of confidence. That is the decisive factor and Mr. Hoover has been quick to see it and to realize that that is where decisive action is needed.

"Through you and for the German people I express our deep appreciation for the services of Ambassador Frederick M. Sackett in bringing about this action. This wise, quiet man long has advocated solution along the lines which Mr. Hoover now proposes.

"We Germans know now he worked on our problem in his unobstrusive, statesmanlike manner.

Dr. Curtis turned then to the work of the German government itself.

Sees Foreign Policy Justified.

"I think," he said, "the time has come to say that our foreign policy of conciliation and of international cooperation is now fully justified."

"It took an iron nerve to hold out when on every side there was clamor for haste."

"Chancellor Bruening and his whole cabinet have clung tenaciously to the position that the United States was the deciding factor and that nothing should be done to check the efforts of the American Government.

"Our conference with Prime Minister MacDonald at Chequers now is shown to have been more than justified, for by a providential coincidence your Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon, reached London almost immediately after we had left."

"There is one more thing I want to tell you," said Dr. Curtius. "That is that we must not forget that next to the United States France makes the greatest sacrifice in accepting President Hoover's plan.

Want to Cooperate With France.

"I do not hesitate to recognize this truth fully and appreciatively, and everything possible will be done by Germany to make it easy for France to accept. We have but one wish—to put an effective stop to the world economic crisis, and we want to cooperate with France toward that end in every possible manner."

In a talk with representatives of the government and the opposition press the foreign minister, it was understood, emphasized the fact that the proposed moratorium would apply not only to the postponable annuities, but to unpostponable payments as well.

For Germany this would mean a lightening of her burdens during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1931, by approximately $360,000,000, of which $192,000,000 would be applicable to the national budget and $158,400,000 to the federal railways.

What makes Mr. Hoover's plan so welcome to Germany is, among other things, that the year of grace in no wise interferes with the possibilities for revision contained in the Young plan.

3 Babes Murdered By Crazed Mother

Woman Haunted by Fear of Separation From Her Children.

Lake George, N. Y., June 21 (A.P.).—Mrs. Leon Bearce 3d, who said she was afraid she would be separated from her three children because her husband had told her she was crazy, cut the throats of all three today. Two were found dead and the third died several hours later. The tragedy occurred at the tourist camp Bearce operates.

The bodies of George and Joyce, 10-month-old twins, were found lying side by side in a wood road near the camp after Dena, 4 years old, came running to her father, her windpipe slashed. The child managed to say "Mother did it."

The mother was found near the bodies of the twins. Arresting officers said she admitted killing them, and said she would have killed herself "if the knife had been sharper." She was taken to the Warren County Jail here.

YEARS OF GRACE

By Margaret Ayer Barnes

SYNOPSIS.

When Jane and Stephen return from Boston, after attending Mr. Carver's funeral, they find that matters have come to a head. Cicily has told her father that she and Albert Lancaster are going to get married as soon as each of them can get a divorce. Both Belle and Jack have consented to the arrangement. Belle is going to Reno and Cicily to Paris to get their decrees. The entire families are scandalized, but completely helpless. The younger generation is in the saddle and planning things its own way. Isabel tells Jane she must talk to Cecily. Jane agrees to see what she can do.

CICILY, JENNY AND STEVE.

CHAPTER XI.

"BUT Cicily," said Jane, half an hour later, "have you never heard of conduct?" She was sitting hand in hand with her daughter on the sofa in the little French drawing room.

"I have," said Cicily firmly, "and I think I'm conducting myself very well!" The child's young voice rang true with conviction.

"How can you think that, Cicily?" said Jane sadly. "I'm not asking you to consider your father or me, or your grandmother, or your Aunt Isabel, or your Uncle Robin. But leaving us all out of it, you're wrecking ten lives."

"Meaning Albert's and Belle's and Jack's and mine and the lives of all six children?" smiled Cicily. "Mumsy, don't be hysterical!"

"But you are, Cicily," said Jane. "You're wrecking them all for your own individual pleasure. You're utterly selfish. You don't care what havoc you make——"

Necessary Operation, She Says.

"I'm not making havoc!" cried Cicily indignantly. "I'm not making havoc, any more than a surgeon is who performs a necessary operation. No one likes operations. They're very unpleasant. But they save lives. People cry and carry on, but later they're glad they had them. It takes time, of course, to get over a major incision. But you wait, Mumsy. In two years' time we'll all be a great deal happier. A great deal happier than we've been for years."

"You will, perhaps," said Jane. "And possibly Albert. But what about Jack and Belle?"

"Don't talk about Belle!" cried Cicily contemptuously.

"I have to talk about her," said Jane very seriously. "You have to think of her. You're doing her a great wrong."

"Mumsy," cried Cicily, "you are not civilized. You have the morals of the stone age! You really have. I'm not wronging Belle! She doesn't love Albert. She just wants to hang on to him because she doesn't love any one else! If she did, she'd be all smiles. No one likes to be left, Mumsy, but if Belle were doing the leaving——"

"But she's not," said Jane firmly. "Facts are facts. Belle says she loves her husband."

Jack's Been "Great" About It.

"Well, she's never said that to me," said Cicily. "And she's never had the nerve to say it to Albert either. Jack's been great about it, Mumsy. He really has. He didn't talk like that."

"Where is he?" said Jane. "I'd like to speak to him."

"He moved out yesterday," said Cicily calmly. "He's living at the University Club."

"Oh, Cicily!" said Jane pitifully.

For the first time in this distressing interview, Cicily herself seemed slightly shaken.

"I won't say, Mumsy," she said—and her voice was slightly tremulous—"I won't say that it wasn't a bad moment when he left his house. But it's always a bad moment when you go up to the operating room. And for divorce they can't give you ether. I wish they could. I wish we could all just go to sleep and wake up when it was safely over." She turned from the window boxes to face her mother. "It will be safely over, Mumsy. I'm not going to weaken. I'm not going to be sentimental." She took her stand on the hearthrug and looked firmly at Jane. "It's utter nonsense to think that if you love one man you can be happy living with another. You don't understand that, Mumsy, because you've always loved Dad. There never was any one else. If there had been——" Cicily's voice trailed suddenly off into silence. She was staring at Jane.

"Mumsy!" she cried quickly. "Don't tell me there ever was any one else? Mumsy! was there?"

Intends to Tell Whole Truth.

"Yes," said Jane soberly. Suddenly she felt very near to Cicily. It seemed important to tell her the whole truth. "Yes. There was."

Cicily's face was alight with sympathy. "Before Dad, Mumsy—or after?"

Jane suddenly felt that the whole truth could not be told. "Before," she said.

Cicily looked at her. "And after, Mumsy? Never after?"

Jane's eyes fell before her daughter's "Once," she said.

"Mumsy!" cried Cicily. "Tell me! I never——"

"I don't want to tell you," said Jane.

"Did you tell Dad?"

"No," said Jane.

"Mumsy!" cried Cicily. "Did you really deceive him?"

"I deceived him," said Jane soberly. "My God!" said Cicily. "When and how?"

"Oh, long ago," said Jane. "And just as every one else does, I suppose. I loved a man who loved me. And when he told me, I told him. And I—I said I'd go away with him. But I didn't."

"What next?" said Cicily.

"Nothing next," said Jane.

"Was that all?" said Cicily.

"Yes," said Jane.

And That's All the Story.

"You didn't go away with him, nor—nor—you know, Mumsy——you didn't——without going away?"

"I didn't."

"You just loved him, and didn't?"

"Yes."

"And you call that deception?"

"I call that deception," said Jane.

Cicily's eyes were unbelievably twinkling. "Mumsy," she said, "is that all the story?"

"That's all the story," said Jane.

Cicily drew a long breath. "Well, I believe you," she said. "But I don't know why I do. Resisted temptations become lost opportunities, Mumsy. Haven't you always regretted it?"

"I've never regretted it," said Jane.

"Not the loving, of course," said Cicily, "but the not going away."

"Not that either," said Jane.

"Mumsy," said Cicily, "you are simply incredible. You are not civilized. You have the morals of the Stone Age! I should think an experience like that would make you see how wise I am to take my happiness——"

"You don't achieve happiness," said Jane very seriously, "by taking it."

"How do you know?" said Cicily promptly. "You never tried!"

Returns Home to Find Jack.

"I've always been happy," said Jane with dignity, "with your father."

"I can't believe that, Mumsy. Not after what you've told me."

"Well, I'm happy now," said Jane. "Much happier now than if——"

"But that's what you don't know, Mumsy!" said Cicily, smiling. "And what I'll never know either. You have to choose in life!"

Jane rose slowly from the little French sofa. "Cicily," she said, "how can I stop you?"

"You can't," said Cicily.

It was terribly true.

"But you can love me," said Cicily. She walked quickly across the room and took Jane in her arms. "You can love me always. You will love me, won't you, Mumsy—whatever happens?"

Jane felt the hot tears running down her cheeks.

"Cicily!" she cried. "I love you—terribly. I want to help you—I want to save you! I want you to be happy, but I know you won't be!"

"I shall be for a while," said Cicily cheerfully. "And after that we'll see."

It was on that philosophic utterance that Jane left her. When she reached her living room again, she found Jack standing on the hearthrug. He was facing Isabel and Stephen a trifle belligerently. He looked tired and worn and worried. He had no smile for Jane.

Cicily's All Right, Jack Says.

"I know you think, sir," he was saying wearily, "that I ought to be able to keep her—that I ought to refuse to let her go. But how can I? You can't insist on living with a woman who doesn't want to live with you—if you love her, you can't."

"Well, Jane?" said Isabel. "Did you make any headway?"

Jane shook her head.

"Jack," she said slowly, "I'm ashamed of my daughter."

Jack threw her a little twisted smile. "Don't say that, Aunt Jane. I'm proud of my wife. I always have been and I can't break the habit. Cicily's all right. She'll pull through. We'll all pull through, somehow."

"But what will you do, Jack?" wailed Isabel.

"I haven't thought it out," said Jack. "But you can always do something. The world is wide, you know." He looked, rather hesitatingly, at Stephen. "I thought I'd leave the bank, sir, for a time, at any rate." That would be hard on Stephen, thought Jane swiftly. "I'd like to take up my engineering. I want to leave Lakewood, and I thought if I began to fool around with those old problems again—go back to school, perhaps——"

"Atta boy!" It was Jenny's cheerful voice. She was standing in the doorway, smiling in at them all very tranquilly.

"Jenny, come in," said Stephen soberly. "We have something to tell you."

Cicily Must Run Her Folly.

"I've known about it for weeks, Dad," said Jenny affably. She advanced to the hearthrug and thrust her arm through Jack's. "Cicily's a fool, but she must run her folly. It's a great shame that the world was organized with two sexes. It makes for a lot of trouble. I'm all on Jack's side. I have been from the start. I'm thinking of marrying him myself, if he'll turn that old bean of his to the raising of Russian wolf hounds!"

Jack met his sister-in-law's levity with rather an uncertain smile. She grinned cheerfully at him.

"Want a drink, Jacky?"

"Jenny!" cried Isabel, in shocked accents.

"Of course, he does!" persisted Jenny coolly. "I'll ring for a cocktail." As she walked toward the bell, her clear young eyes wandered brightly over the ravaged faces of the older generation. "Do you know, you're all taking this a great deal too seriously? It's not the end of the world. It's not even the end of Cicily and Jack and Albert and Belle. They're all going to live to make you a great deal more trouble. Save your strength, boys and girls, for future crises!" She turned to meet the maid. "A whisky sour, Irma, and some anchovy sandwiches. You'll all feel better when you've had a drink."

Jack Grateful to Jenny.

It was, Jane was reflecting, an incredible generation. They took nothing seriously. Unless, perhaps, the preservation of the light touch. But Jack looked distinctly cheered. And very grateful to Jenny. Yet Jack loved Cicily—— When the whisky arrived Jane was very much surprised to find herself drinking it. She drank two cocktails. Isabel did, too, and ate four anchovy sandwiches as well.

"I had no lunch," she remarked in melancholy explanation. Then, "I'll run you in town, Jack," she said, putting down her glass.

"No, I'm going over to call on the kids," said Jack very surprisingly. "They leave in three days." He turned toward the door.

"I'll see you at the Winters' musicale tonight," said Jenny.

"I'm not quite sure," said Jack slowly.

"Nonsense!" said Jenny. "Of course I will. The Casino, at nine. You must make Belle go, Aunt Isabel. You must make her wear her prettiest frock!"

"Belle wouldn't dream of going," said Isabel with dignity.

"I bet she does," said Jenny. "And rightly so!"

"Jenny," said Jane gently, "don't."

Take Divorce More Calmly.

"Cicily and Albert won't be there, Mumsy. He'll be out there with her, as she's going in three days. And if they were, what of it? What of it? Why carry on so about it? It's all in the day's work. Can't you take a divorce a little more calmly?"

No, she couldn't, thought Jane, when Jack and Isabel had gone and Jenny had returned to her room and the "American Kennels Gazette" and she was left alone with Stephen before the living room fire. She really couldn't. And she did not want to. What was the world coming to? What had gone out of life? What was missing in the moral fiber of the rising generation? Did decency mean nothing to them? Did loyalty? Did love? Did love mean too much, perhaps? One kind of love. It was a sex-ridden age.

But these children had character. They had managed this appalling affair with extraordinary ability and restraint. They had a code, Jane dimly perceived, a code that was based—on what? Bravado and barbarism or courage and common sense? It was very perplexing. It was very complicated. It was wrecking the older generation. But it was not a clear-cut issue, Jane admitted with a sigh, between the apes and the angels.

Catholic Parades Resumed in Italy

Deferred Feast Day Processions Held When Pope Lifts Ban.

Rome, June 21 (A.P.).—Public religious processions were resumed in Italy today after Pope Pius raised his ban against these ceremonials Thursday.

Because of the controversy between the Vatican and the Italian government, Italy has been without these cherished processions for almost a month. Most of today's parades were those which had been postponed from other feast days.

Perhaps the most vivid was that held at Genzano, called "Infiorata" because hundreds of flower girls scattered blossoms on the street and the marchers, including the city's entire clergy, marched on a thick floral carpet. The ceremony originally was scheduled for June 4.

Virtually every diocese had a procession in honor of St. Anthony of Padua, the 700th anniversary of whose death was honored June 13.

In each case the diocesan bishop was required to give special permission in conformity with the Pope's orders.

Newlyweds Die in Plane Crash at Pelham Manor

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 21 (A.P.).—Myron S. Hutchinson, sales manager for an airplane company, was killed and his bride of a few months was fatally injured as their plane crashed today on the Pelham-Biltmore Country Club golf course in Pelham Manor.

Several golfers were narrowly missed as the plane struck the top of a tree and nose-dived to a fairway. Crowds on the porch of the clubhouse, 150 feet away, said the engine had suddenly gone dead and the pilot was attempting a forced landing. Hutchinson, representative of the Stinson Airplane Co., of Wayne, Mich., was pinned under the motor and died instantly. Mrs. Hutchinson died in a New Rochelle hospital.

Railway Zeppelin Beats Airplane

Freak German Speedster Cuts Four Minutes Off Air Schedule.

Berlin, June 21 (A.P.).—Franz Kruckenberg's "Zeppelin on Wheels" today bettered by four minutes the regular Lufthansa passenger plane time between Hamburg and Spandau, on the outskirts of Berlin, running the course in two minutes less than its own schedule.

Kruckenberg, the inventor, was accompanied in the high speed railroad coach by his wife, the pilot, Willy Black; his assistant, Kurt Stedefeld, and two mechanics. The trip was said to have been uneventful and smooth except for one or two short stretches of fog which, however, did not hamper the progress of the coach.

A commercial airplane which took off from Hamburg at the same time to follow the progress of the strange new rail speedster, was behind most of the time, but overtook the "Zeppelin on Wheels" when it slowed down at the end of the journey.

Rockefeller Gives Million for Parks

Gift Completes Fund for Preservation of Redwood Forests.

San Francisco, June 21 (A.P.).—The California State Park Commission has announced the successful completion of negotiations for purchase of additional forest lands for the park system, with receipt of a check for $1,000,000 from John D. Rockefeller.

Ten thousand acres of redwoods will be added to State parks. The campaign was sponsored over a ten-year period by the Save-the-Redwoods League, of which Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, D. C., is the head.

Rockefeller not only gave $1,000,000 unconditionally, but pledged a second million to match private gifts as received. The sum to be matched has reached between $600,000 and $700,000.

WOODLAND BEACH VISITED BY SCORES

Capital Residents Find Relief From the Heat at Post Colony.

All day yesterday strings of automobiles rolled along Defense Highway headed for Woodland Beach and relief from the heat of the city.

Why? Because the territory in and around Woodland Beach is the kind that appeals to you when days are hottest and summer is at its height.

Woodland Beach is The Washington Post's summer home development site, located on two coves of the South River, in Maryland, just 32 miles away. To reach it, one turns off Defense Highway at Camp Parole onto Maryland State Highway, No. 2, across South River, and then left onto Mayo road, leading direct to the beach clubhouse.

Lots Cost Only $93 Each.

It costs only $93 to become a lot owner at this garden spot. The down payment is only $9, plus the price of a subscription to The Washington Post. The remainder of the amount may be paid in monthly installments of $3.50.

Woodland Beach offers boating, bathing and fishing on the river; shady trees a rural atmosphere of peace and quiet and a bargain in money.

The entire area has been laid out into streets and avenues cut through the heavy natural wooded ground so that each lot is easily accessible. Many of those who bought lots when Woodland Beach was first announced have begun building operations. The ordinary quiet of the water front is broken by the hammering and sawing which accompanies the erection of summer homes.

Good Lots Still Available.

Yesterday while scores of parents went with salesmen to look over prospective home sites, their children played on amusement devices erected in the rear of the clubhouse. Others rested in that clubhouse, which is well appointed, and which will be deeded over to the association of lot owners when the sale at the beach has been completed.

Business was brisk, as it has been since the first announcement of the beach was made. However, due to the size of the tract offered, there are still many choice lots available. They will be sold to the first persons who appear to claim them. If you were unable to visit the beach yesterday, call at The Post today and learn all the details of this magnificent offer. You may regret it a long time, if you don't.

HARD-PRESSED SHIPPING.

Reports that the United States Lines are trying to work out arrangements for return to Government ownership of the fleet purchased in 1929, indicate the grave situation confronting the American merchant marine in spite of the liberal mail contracts granted by the Government to shipping concerns, they find it extremely difficult to make both ends meet during this time of slack business. Tourist traffic has taken a decided slump. Revenue from freight is much lower than in normal times. This is a severe blow to the infant American shipping industry.

Because of this situation all hope for construction of the two superliners which the United States Lines hoped to put in the Atlantic passenger business has been postponed. When the United States fleet was acquired by the Chapman interests it was stipulated that plans for these two superliners should be ready this year. But officials of the company and the Shipping Board agree that it would be unwise to proceed with their construction at this time. As a result the merchant marine will be handicapped in competing for the Atlantic passenger trade.

Americans are well aware of the importance of building up a merchant marine that will operate on all seas under the Stars and Stripes. But citizens often fail to realize that the development of such a fleet is dependent largely upon their patronage. During this crisis competition for passenger and freight traffic is extremely keen. Many foreign vessels are laid up, and many lines are, like those of the United States, operating at a loss. But for the most part they command the patronage of their own people. If the American merchant marine were given the same cooperation, it would probably not now be in straitened circumstances.

At times it is impractical for citizens to patronize American ships, but those occasions are exceptional, for American lines now extend to virtually all parts of the world. The public can not help wondering why Secretary Mellon chose a British vessel for his voyage to Europe. Ambassador Hugh Gibson likewise used a British ship for his return voyage, and Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes sailed on the Italian liner Roma. It is reported also that Secretary Stimson is planning to make his European trip on a foreign-flag ship. It is needless to say that the public is not inspired by these examples.

The law requires officials of the Government to use American ships when they journey overseas on official business, whenever it is practicable to do so. When officials travel for pleasure or personal business they are not under such restrictions, but a desire to support American ships should prompt them to sail under the Stars and Stripes whenever possible. Accommodations on American vessels compare favorably with those of other countries. Citizens are not asked to make a sacrifice to help the merchant marine, but only to turn the odds in its favor. It is especially important that distinguished public officials refrain from slighting American vessels because of the impression their examples make upon the public.

GOMEZ AGAIN PRESIDENT.

Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez, former dictator-president of Venezuela for a score of years, for the last two years the effective power behind the executive chair occupied by his figurehead president, Dr. Perez, has been once more established as president in name as well as in fact by the unanimous action of the Venezuelan Congress. That the proceedings were perfunctory is known to every one familiar with the political situation in Venezuela.

Gomez suffers the existence of the usual form of republican machinery in his country, but it works with a twisted belt. Instead of the Congress initiating laws or taking independent action, it receives its orders from the executive department and does as it is told. Two years ago Gen. Gomez for some reason decided to change the form of his rule. He declined to stand for reelection, and at his suggestion Dr. Perez was elected by Congress for a seven-year term. Coincident with his election, however, the constitution was as readily changed to assure that, as head of the army, Gen. Gomez would remain in absolute control.

In this manner the country has been governed recently, with a dummy president sitting in the executive chair in Caracas, but president and Congress alike obeying instructions from the dictator, ostensibly following the life of a country gentleman. Suddenly, with no valid explanation or apparent reason, Gomez orders Congress to depose President Perez. This is done; and now, a week later, following the usual stereotyped "popular demand," Gomez is again made titular president.

The good that Gomez has done for his native land is freely admitted, notwithstanding the cruelty of his methods of suppressing all political opposition and his acquisition of fabulous personal wealth through monopolistic control, but it does become tiresome to be asked to consider his dictatorship as the acts of a "republic."

TARIFF OBJECT LESSON.

Antiprotectionists who are hoping to break down the American tariff system as a result of the depression are depending largely on the brevity of the public memory. Once upon a time Congress did try to cure a depression by a general reduction of the tariff, and the results were so disastrous that the Democratic party was not again trusted to administer the Government for many years. It will not be amiss to recall the results of the tariff act of 1894.

An economic crisis came upon the country in 1893. The electorate undertook to punish the Republican party for it by giving the Democrats control of Congress. Believing that they had a mandate from the people to sweep away protective duties, the Democrats revised the tariff sharply downward in 1894. But instead of international trade taking a sudden spurt and lifting the country out of the slough of depression, as free-trade economists expected, even imports fell off miserably, and continued to lag behind for a number of years. "Relief" from the tariff not only failed to bring the anticipated prosperity, but it plunged the country into deeper economic gloom. The years between 1894 and 1897 are remembered as a period of despair and hard times.

The outcome of this experiment was the election of President McKinley and the calling of an extra session of Congress in 1897 to revise the tariff and raise funds to relieve the distressed Treasury. The tariff which Congress enacted in July of that year restored protection to American industry and labor. Once more the Government had ample revenue, and prosperity soon returned. It is interesting to note that imports into the United States have been gradually increasing since that time, and that exports have grown to enormous proportions.

This is not the only illustration the country has had of how failure to protect American enterprise reacts upon the standard of living. In 1872 a blanket reduction of duties was ordered by Congress, but the crisis of 1873 prompted Congress to reinstate the former rates. With very brief exceptions American enterprise has been protected ever since the Civil War. It is true that the Democrats made a gesture of returning to free trade in 1913, but the lower duties which Conress set up never became effective. The world war suddenly cut off virtually all competition, and American producers enjoyed a much greater degree of protection than they have ever been given by a tariff law. At the close of the war it was found necessary to reestablish a substantial protective system to avoid the ruin of many industries.

If the antiprotectionists could point to some instance in the long tariff history of the United States where a depression had been cured by opening American markets to cheap foreign goods, it would materially strengthen their cause. But the record of 1894 is enough to send cold chills down the backs of tariff fighters. When the Democrats turn their heavy artillery against the Smoot-Hawley act in the sacred name of future prosperity it is with the solemn hope that the public has forgotten the calamities they brought upon the country during the middle nineties.

INTERSTATE WATER COMMERCE.

The intercoastal shipping trade of the United States is coming to Washington to ask the Shipping Board to regulate the business in such fashion as to establish a basis of fixed minimum rates and standard conditions. At the present time the intercoastal shipping trade is in a state of turmoil. Rate cutting is the order of the day. Shippers have no way of telling what rates they may expect, nor can they guess what rates their competitors are likely to receive. The lines themselves have little idea of the prospects of making profitable voyages. They try to fill their ships at any price. They have a first-class rate war on their hands.

For several years this trade has been an eyesore on the American shipping horizon. The varied make-up of the carriers has led to difficulties. There are so-called proprietary carriers which maintain lines primarily for delivery of their own goods, but have left-over space for sale; there are lines operating fast ships, and there are lines operating slow ships. From time to time there have been conferences, or associations, under which members agreed to the maintenance of fixed minimum rates. But not all the lines would join the conference. The outsiders have always been in a position to underbid the conference rates, with disastrous effect upon the conference lines. The conference was in a position to force its members to lay up ships when business was dull, but the consent of nonconference lines to cooperate in such practice never could be obtained. Frequently the Shipping Board has attempted to maintain order in this trade, but not until now, with virtually all the lines suffering from the ravages of depression and aggravated by the current rate war, have the owners expressed a willinness to submit to Government regulation.

The railroads were unable to cope with unregulated competition until effective control over their rates was established by the Government. The intercoastal shipping problem parallels that of the railroads and it would be decidedly in the public interest, as well as in the interest of the operators, to have governmental regulation applicable to all lines.

The Shipping Board was created to act as a regulatory body having semijudicial authority over shipping in some such manner as that exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission over railroads. The board was made independent of the commission, to guard against any possible favoritism which might be accorded railroads at the expense of shipping lines. While recognizing that such a board could regulate domestic shipping, which is protected against foreign competition by the coastwise laws, Congress failed to put sufficient teeth to the 1916 shipping act to enable the board to assert real regulation over the intercoastal trade. The law provided merely that domestic carriers should be required to file their maximum rate schedules with the Shipping Board, where they are open for public inspection and empowered the board to penalize any who might charge rates in excess of those on file.

The intercoastal operators gave themselves plenty of leeway by filing rates about equal to those maintained by the transcontinental railroads. These rail rates always have exceeded the water rates, and have meant nothing whatever to shippers. Had the intercoastal steamship lines been required to file both maximum and minimum rates, subject to the approval of the Shipping Board, the narrow range between the two rates would have made rate wars impossible. The big operators now see that the advantages of this stabilization far outweigh the disadvantages of government supervision of their affairs. The smaller operators and those independents held responsible for most of the recent rate cutting may as well become resigned to Government regulation.

Congress will have this important shipping question to consider when it meets in December, with the strong probability that the Government will find it advisable and necessary to assert regulatory control over intercoastal interstate commerce.

Senator Lewis makes a plea for briefer platforms. But there's not much chance of pleasing him. If the platform makers were brief there would be too much danger of saying what they mean.

It may be supposed that Sir Hubert Wilkins will carry plenty of tow chains on his excursion under the polar ice, but the whales may not be so considerate as was the battleship Wyoming.

David Dietz's new book explains the universe, the earth, atoms and life. Why does he slight baseball and politics?

Beware Democratic senators bearing gifts of cooperation!

CALVIN COOLIDGE SAYS:

Northampton, Mass., June 21.—The centralization of power in Washington which nearly all members of Congress deplore in their speech and then support by their votes, steadily increases. The latest report is that the Federal employment service will have a bureau in every State and the District of Columbia. The farmer, who was the shining example of sturdy independence, has entrusted the Government with finding him a market. Now the wage earner is to look to the same source to find employment. Individual self-reliance is disappearing and local self-government is being undermined.

A revolution is taking place which will leave the people dependent upon the Government and place the Government where it must decide questions that are far better left to the people to decide for themselves. Finding markets will develop into fixing prices, and finding employment will develop into fixing wages. The next step will be to furnish markets and employment or in default pay a bounty and a dole. Those who look with apprehension on these tendencies do not lack humanity, but are influenced by the belief that the result of such measures will be to deprive the people of character and liberty.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

VOTELESS FRENCH WOMEN

From the Boston Transcript.

France, through Aristide Briand, invokes the help of her women in sustaining its national policy of peace through a European compact. But it does not invoke the aid of women to the extent of giving them the suffrage. France is in this respect an anomaly among existing republics and among monarchial countries that are on a democratic footing. There is indeed an active woman suffrage movement in France, but it makes no perceptible progress toward achieving its purpose. Yet France is one of the most advanced, the most radical, nations of Europe. Why does it still refuse the vote to women?

It is partly for the reason that French women in general, in spite of the active but limited movement to which we have referred, do not ask for or crave the suffrage. That they do not do so is in a considerable degree the result of a different basis of social life from that of the more northern lands, republican or still nominally monarchist. Women are influential in France, and always have been. They certainly bear their share in the economic life of the country. In no other land, probably, are so many shops and industries conducted by women as in France. They are not muzzled in expression. Everywhere they give utterance to their views with the completest freedom. They do not in the least have the appearance of being oppressed. But something in their Latin traditions, possibly inherited from the practice of a church which no longer has any legal domination and but a comparatively slight influence, restrains them from a tendency to participate in politics.

Mention of the church brings forward another, and perhaps the most immediately potent, reason for the withholding of the suffrage from the women of France. The prevailing attitude of French politics toward the church is now one of opposition and suspicion, and there is among the statesmen of the country a strong impression that suffrage for women would add to the voting strength of the church. The peasant women of the country, and very likely the majority of the women of the working and small trading classes, remain in a sort of habitual way, if not altogether from conviction, under the influence of the clergy. The politicians fear that this fact, under suffrage, would reverse the restrictive measures, with regard to public education, now visited on the church. The church in France has considerably increased in popularity since the war. The radical statesmen are completely averse to any policy, no matter how liberal it may appear on the surface, which might further strengthen the influence of the clergy.

Oh, It's Nothing to Growl About.

POST HASTE.

Debt postponement, according to the President's proposal, would affect only 6 per cent of our budget income, so don't fear or expect too much.

But consider the moral effect of the old cry "The Yanks are coming."

You may have had worries yesterday, but think of a Frenchman pondering the postponement of German debts.

And post-mortems on the moratorium will be something terrible.

At best "moratorium" has a funereal sound that somehow seems prophetic.

The mournful wails that are foreing debt delays are cheerful ditties in comparison with future dirges against resumption.

No linking of debt payments to reparations, said Uncle Sam. Well, just this once.

The next transatlantic inquiry to U. S. A.—What are you going to give us in exchange for what we are not going to give you?

Lloyd George hastens to dig the hole a bit deeper for France by approving debt prorogation right off the bat.

At least the world was relieved of any necessity of wondering whether Germany would agree to debt delays.

Washington news, while not affecting the visit of Secretary Mellon with his son, will doubtless render his private sessions with European officials more cordial.

Of course, President Hoover does not say that America's action on the debt is predicated on European arms reduction, but he is a broad hinter.

The Executive's un-Shylock assurance that we "have no desire to attempt to extract any sum beyond the capacity of the debtor to pay" is going to raise future questions on the definition of "capacity."

Will Germany's Hitlerite reactionaries and communistic radicals cooperate with foreign powers now in helping the Fatherland?

"The President has been assured of the cordial support of leading members of both parties in the Senate and the House." Do the 531 members of Congress agree that these 40 are the leading members

And where is Senator Robinson, valiant leader of the last cooperative biparty assurance of support?

It must not be considered that the debt overture is in any sense an entering wedge for cancellation—not this year.

Finally, now, a moratorium has cold storage facilities, but it is not a mortuary vault.

SILENT.

I did not argue with the man,
It seemed a waste of words.
He gave to chance the wondrous plan
That gave sweet song to birds.

He gave to force the wisdom wise
That shaped the honey bee
And made the useful butterflies
So beautiful to see.

And as we walked 'neath splendid trees
Which cast a friendly shade,
He said: "Such miracles as these
By accident were made."

Too well I know what accident
And chance and force disclose
To think blind fury could invent
The beauty of a rose.

I let him talk and answered not,
I merely thought it odd
That he could view a garden plot
And not believe in God.

Whatever the Government Gives to Bill Smith Is Taken From John Brown.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

IT is customary to think of veterans of the World War as needy men who deserve Government aid.

But veterans are not a distinct class. They are middle-aged men who pay taxes as other people do. Many of them are rich, and many more are well-to do.

Thus veterans as a class play a double role. As men who served their country they receive compensation, and as present taxpayers they provide the money to compensate themselves.

Of course the prosperous ones pay more and receive less, but the point is that any money received from the Government by one veteran makes taxes higher for all of the others.

That is fair enough if the one who receives the money really deserves it; but in an ever-increasing number of cases the money is not deserved, and unless the veterans themselves do something to discourag this raiding of the Treasury, they as well as others must resign themselves to an ever-increasing tax burden.

Take the matter of war insurance.

At the time of their discharge, most of the veterans had a $5,000 or $10,000 insurance policy. Many of them continued to pay the premiums and kept the insurance in force. Many did not.

If a veteran who kept his insurance in force becomes totally disabled, he begins to draw a monthly income and need pay no more.

That is fair and just.

But others who kept their insurance in force and are not disabled can get the same benefits if a jury so decrees.

And still others, who dropped their insurance and are not disabled, can get the money if they can make a jury believe they were totally disabled months or years ago when they allowed their policies to lapse.

Therefore, thousands of them, desperate and out of work, are bringing suit in Federal courts to get this easy money.

Lawyers take the cases for as little as 10 per cent of the money obtained. In one district a single lawyer has 485 cases.

At the last term of court, where most of the cases were decided against the Government, the judge refused to let two cases go before a jury. "Neither of these men has any case," said he, "but they are jobless and have families to support, and the jury would give them the money out of sympathy."

That is the story in a nutshell. Juries composed of poor men will give a poor man Government money nine times in ten.

Of course some of the cases are deserving, but most of them are based on need alone.

Are the veterans who pay taxes willing to pay more to help the veterans who need money?

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Mr. Hoover's Best Speech.

Detroit News.

President Hoover's speech at Indianapolis was much more than a defense of his administration. It was a reiteration of his faith in America. It contained the Hoover philosophy, which has not been shaken by "the greatest crisis the world has ever known." It revealed once more the Hoover who refuses to play the political game according to the rules of politicians, but prefers to be guided by his own judgment.

To the political mind, the President's speech may have seemed injudicious. His whole thesis is that because America is what it is, conditions are bound to return to normal prosperity. But suppose they don't before November, 1932? Has he not committed himself, and inferentially the Republican party, to a refusal to adopt any of the remedial suggestions that have been proposed—a vast Federal program of public works, unemployment funds, tariff revision, pensions and insurance? This is the time, a year before the national conventions, when the typical politician holds his breath and keeps his fingers on the public pulse, refusing to commit himself until he gauges the thought and temper of the people, and then following the majority.

Quite evidently, President Hoover is not the typical politician. Indeed, he has offended many political advisers by refusing to adopt their suggestions. He seems to have no eye for the main chance. He neglects political opportunities.

Atlanta Constitution.

No president of the United States ever had a more difficult task than has President Hoover, who sets out on a Western tour to justify and defend his administration.

His first address was delivered last night at Indianapolis to the Indiana Republican Editorial Association.

It may be said of the President that he has made the best of a hard job, but not even his warmest admirers can conceive for a moment that his explanation of what his administration has done for the country will be satisfactory to those who are now bearing the burden of the predicament of wheat, the decimation of cotton and the debacle of the foreign markets for American exports, and of the real reason for the enormous Treasury deficits which, with the threat of additional taxes, hangs over the Nation like a pall.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Taxpayer Wants to Know Why Southwest Site Is Pressed for War & Navy Building.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested in reading issue of June 16 that Chairman Wo of the House appropriation committee and Ross Collins (Democrat), Mississippi, thought that the Northwest site for the War and Navy Buildings was entirely too expensive. They wanted to change the site to the Southwest section.

These well-known and outstanding men have been misinformed, and it is rather strange that men of their position would come out publicly and make a statement which is not correct.

Why is this interest in the Southwest section so keen after this question has been decided by the duly authorized bodies, properly selected, who have decided unanimously on the Northwest section? Is it to spend more of the people's money instead of saving it?

Are these men aware that the 1929-1930 assessment of the property in the Northwest section only amounts to $2,162,000 and that of the Southwest section amounts to $3,046,000? On the site which they are trying to bring about by force, according to the assessment, it will cost $800,000 more. Why is their interest so great in the Southwest section? Is it to increase the expenditures of the people's money?

Why do they mention Corcoran Courts and the Boulevard Apartments? Why don't they put in the Mayflower Hotel at De Sales street and Connecticut avenue or the Shoreham Hotel? For their information and for the information of the public, neither Corcoran Courts nor the Boulevard Apartments is in the Keyes-Elliott bill; neither is the Mayflower nor the Shoreham.

As a native of Washington, as a taxpayer and as a man who desires to see Washington beautified, I wish to acknowledge my debt of gratitude to the members of the Public Building Commission for their good judgment and foresight in selecting the only desirable and available site to complete the beautiful vista from the Capitol to the Mall.

G. A. WASHINGTON.

United States Senator Drunk! Oklahoma Born in Whisky! Washington Worse Than Indianapolis!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, Mr. Witherspoon, wants corroborative letters of liquor conditions in this country prior to the prohibition amendment. Well, here goes for one.

I am in my seventy-fourth year and was born in Indianapolis, leaving there for Washington in my twenty-fourth year. Indianapolis was rotten with whisky and beer, you might say perfectly putrid. When I arrived in Washington I found conditions worse. Street cars reeked with fumes of besotted dissipation and debauch. I remember seeing a United States senator reel into the chamber so intoxicated he did not know what he was doing, waving his arms to make an idiotic speech.

I went into Oklahoma when the Cherokee outlet opened in 1893. Whisky, graft and banditry opened that country. Land offices would not accept drafts. Banks charged settlers in making deposits. The bandits robbed the settlers right and left. The whisky and beer "joints" dotted the townsites. The two railroads, Atchison and Rock Island, controlled the Legislature and all political appointments. Oklahoma had its birth in seething vice and whisky.

The union stations in Kansas City and St. Louis were encircled with saloons where gamblers and thieves doped the beer of settlers on their way to Oklahoma, robbing them and throwing them into back alleys to recover consciousness.

When I look back over the past I can truthfully testify that present conditions are a paradise compared with those prior to the amendment.

Manuel Quezon Denies That Filipinos Have Changed Front on Question of Independence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of May 22, 1931, makes the assertion that the Filipino people and their leaders have turned around and no longer desire independence.

As president of the Philippine Senate and in my capacity as head of the Philippine Independence Mission to the United States, I wish to say emphatically that the Filipino people are as anxious as ever for their independence and that the Filipino leaders, including myself, have not changed front on this question.

As far as I am concerned, my mission in the United States, in the language of the resolution of the Philippine Legislature, by which authority I am here, is "to petition the Government and Congress of the United States for the early granting of independence to the Philippines." This is my instruction, and I am doing my best to carry it out.

Keep Kissable—Reach for a Pork Chop Instead of the Spinach.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I glean from the Treasury Department's censorship of the Department of Agriculture's health broadcast that the Treasury is 100 per cent American in its regard for the meat industry, and its lack of interest in the Nation's health.

Why just a half-measure like censorship? Why not substitute for "Health Talks" the "Stock Yard Jazzers," and adopt the slogan, "Keep Kissable—Reach for a Pork Chop Instead of the Spinach?"

Spanish Scene Is Reproduced At Luncheon

Naval Attache Is Host Amid Reminiscent Decorations.

THAT an officer of the erstwhile royal Spanish navy can depict the colorful romance of a little Spanish town, no matter what the environment, was evidenced on Saturday at a luncheon, small and exclusive, given by Commander Federico Monreal y Pilon, Naval Attache of the Spanish Embassy, at his bachelor suite.

Among his guests was a trio of lieutenants of the navy of Spain, who had come "a-visiting" from their studies in engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston and the host had assembled a gay little group to meet them, forthwith setting each one to the task of preparing the delicacies which suggested a well-planned menu from some wayside inn high in the Pyrenees.

Like a street scene of old Seville the dining room presented a galaxy of colors. Brilliant posters of the Iberian-American Exposition of two years ago formed gay splashes on the walls; colored prints of Andalusian senoritas in ruffled skirts of pink and orange and the inevitable high combs and lace mantillas lent the Latin touch; quaint Spanish dolls were placed in various parts of the room and festooning the ceiling were tiny flags of all the Spanish provinces and various coats of arms of the army and navy of the Iberian peninsula.

A white cloth covered the table, the sole decoration of which was reminiscent of Montmartre—large loaves of hard crusted bread and bottles of red wine. And with the savoir faire of old Spain the host entertained his guests in the living-room which is hung with paisley shawls and a few paintings of picturesque Madrid.

Commander Federico Monreal y Pilon had as his guests a few members of the staff at the embassy and some guests visiting here from his native country. He came to Washington last winter to assume his duties.

Society Moves To Fashionable Coast Resorts

Many Capital Leaders At Bar Harbor and Newport.

While Washington society has many sets, which are increasing in number rather than diminishing, and while its members are scattered for the summer over the fashionable places of several continents, many still remain in this country where they have establishments at Newport, Bar Harbor and other popular resorts.

Newport continues to be the most important summer place, and with good reason, for its miles of avenue are flanked by what in Europe would be called palaces, its wealth is untold, and the names associated with it are by reason of their exclusiveness and power acknowleged leaders of American society.

Mrs. Elisha Dyer, who before her marriage a few years ago, was Miss Katherine Whitaker, daughter of Mrs. Price Whitaker, and made her debut in Washington, where she made her home for a time, has returned from her annual spring stay in Paris, and is at the Wayside in Newport. Mrs. Duncan Cameron and her daughters, Miss Elsie Quinby and Miss Phoebe Quinby, have also returned from Europe and are at their recently completed villa in Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barrett and their daughter, Miss Audrey Barrett, who have just returned from England where Miss Barrett was presented at the Court of St. James at one of the spring drawing rooms, have gone to their home at Bar Harbor, which by many, is regarded as the most beautiful place in the country.

Mrs. Louis Lehr and Miss Mary Elkins Reed, who have decided to spend the summer abroad, are now in France, where they are motoring with friends in Brittany before going to Paris and later to Belgium and Holland.

Mr. McLaughlin officiated.

The maid of honor was Miss Anne Haskins of Washington, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. M. C. Teague, sister of thet bride, of Jackson Heights, Long Island, and Mrs. H. A. Romine, Oklahoma City, Okla. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. William Irby of Lynn, Mass. Her niece, Jane Irby Teague, was flower girl.

Mr. Arthur Schuyler Jewett, Brookline, Mass., was best man and the ushers were Mr. Edwin L. Stoiber, brother of the bridegroom, Dr. Campbell Howard, of Summit, N. J., and Mr. C. P. B. Spidell, New York City.

The bride, a graduate of Blackstone College for Women, attended Columbia University. The bridegroom was graduated from Harvard in 1911. After a wedding trip to Bermuda, they will be at home at the hotel Tudor, New York City.

Helen Allen Is Bride of Bishop Hunt

Ceremony Is Witnessed in Historic Home by Few Relatives.

Miss Helen Mar Allen, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Harvey Allen and granddaughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Edward Jay Allen, of Pittsburgh, was married Saturday by the Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter, canon of Washington Cathedral, to Mr. Bishop Carleton Hunt, son of Mrs. Benjamin Herbert Goldsmith, of Boston, and the late Guy Carleton Hunt, of Bridgeport, Conn.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of relatives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Allen, uncle and aunt of the bride, at 912 Nineteenth street. The house, which was built in 1800 by John Lenthal, supervising architect of the original Capitol, had been decorated with spring flowers and vines. A string orchestra, led by Elizabeth K. Gawthrop, harpist, played softly during the service.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle. She wore a gown of white lace applique over white satin. Her sister, Mrs. Walter Ray Bayliss, of Taunton, Mass., was matron of honor.

The bride was graduated from Goucher in 1925, took her master's degree at Columbia the next year and later was a member of the faculty at Vassar. Mr. Hunt is a graduate of Harvard, where, after service in the World War and as professor of commerce at Dalhousie University, Halifax for two years, he received his doctor's degree in 1930. He is now instructor in economics at Harvard. Both Mr. Hunt and his bride were postgraduate students at the University of London.

They will be at home after July 10 in East Boston.

SERVING BROADER FIELDS

a new light-express body extends the usefulness of

FORD TRUCKS

A GROWING number of standard Ford bodies is being made available for every hauling need. Almost daily, they are extending Ford economy to new business fields.

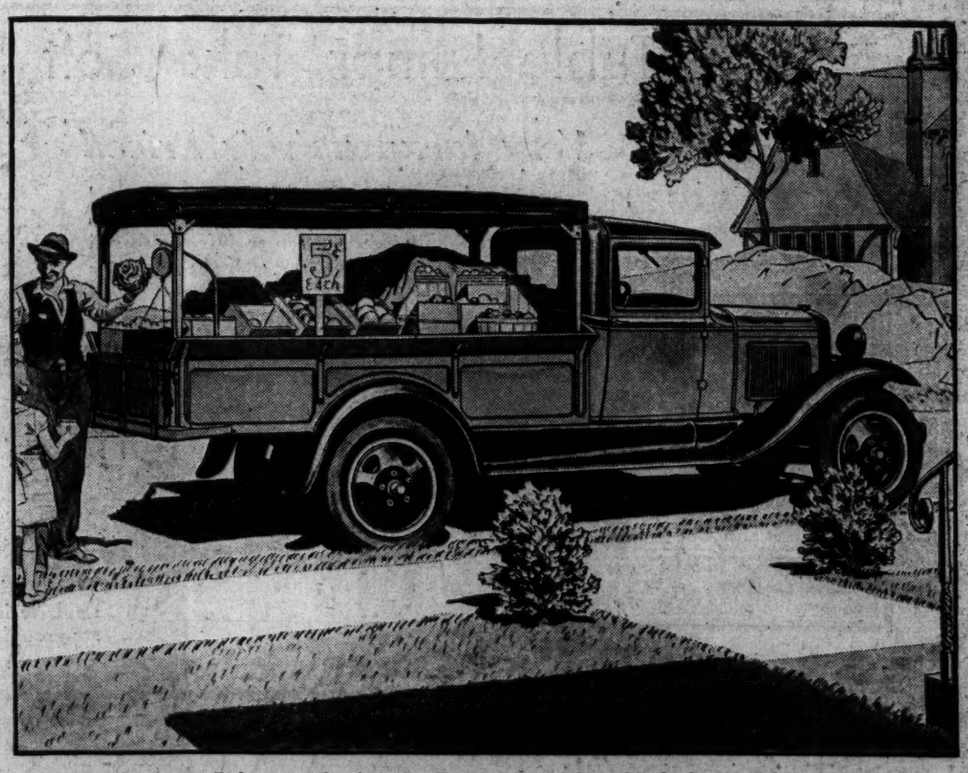
Among these bodies are stake, panel, platform, express and agricultural types, five different dump and four different coal bodies, two police patrols, a funeral coach, an ambulance, a garbage truck, an ice body, and others. With a wide range of choice in style and equipment, they comprise a full line of more than fifty types.

Ford chassis, too, offer a type for every need. The light-delivery car uses the same chassis as the Model A Ford car. The 1½-ton truck chassis is available with 131½-inch or 157-inch wheelbase. It may be equipped with single or dual rear wheels, and with high or low rear-axle gear-ratios.

Into the building of both chassis and bodies go fine materials—each selected for its purpose because it has those qualities of strength, toughness, hardness or flexibility which will serve best in that particular capacity. For example, in the making of the chassis alone, forty different kinds of steel are used.

This is but one example of the value that has been built into the Ford truck. These and many other features of value result in completed commercial units that give long, reliable service, capable performance and economy, offering to every business a specialized hauling service at low cost.

Your Ford dealer can supply a chassis and body that are designed for your hauling needs, in a choice of thirty-eight color-combinations. You may purchase a Ford truck or light commercial car on convenient, economical terms through the Authorized Ford Finance Plans of the Universal Credit Company.



The Light-express Body equipped with Canopy Top. A type widely used by hucksters, vendors, grocers and others, for newspaper and magazine deliveries, and for many other purposes. Made of steel, except for floor-boards and sills, which are of specially seasoned wood. The steel end-gate is eqdipped with heavy chains. Screen sides can be supplied.

DIAL FLASHES

DESPITE the declaration of leaders in the radio industry that practical television for public consumption will be achieved within a year, Commissioner Harold A. Lafount, of the Federal Radio Commission, still believes it will be a matter of several years before visual broadcasting reaches a commercialization stage.

Nevertheless, he admitted that television experimentation has made considerable progress within the past year, and that it appears now to be definitely on the right track.

Simultaneously, the Radio Commission authorized Don Lee, Inc., of Los Angeles, to construct the first visual broadcasting station in the West. A new system of transmission will be employed in the 500-watt station. An electrical, rather than a mechanical, method of scanning will be employed.

While the commission only a few months ago refused to lift the experimental restriction on television, it is believed it will be confronted with the same proposal again shortly after the termination of its summer recess.

"I am not a pessimist," Mr. Lafount said, in explaining his position, "but even with the encouraging progress made by television it is difficult to believe that the next year will usher the new art in as a practical public servant. There are some who say practical television is here today, others who say it is a matter of months, and yet others who believe that several years must elapse. I am one of the latter group."

AFFAIRS and happenings in the lives of the Stebbins brothers will be brought to radio listeners when a new series featuring Phillips Lord and Arthur Allen is inaugurated over WRC today.

The scene of the comedy skit will be laid in Bucksport, Me., a mythical down East township. The Stebbins Boys, as the program will be known, are three brothers. Capt. Bill and Exley have not spoken to each other for fifteen years. Brother John has spent the same period in trying to reconcile the pair. The role of Capt. Bill will be portrayed by Phillips Lord, while his brother, Exley, will be enacted by Arthur Allen.

The Nit Wits are returning to the air over WMAL at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, of Chicago, who obtained the indictment of "Scarface Al" Capone, will reveal some of the nefarious activities of gangland in a Nation-wide radio address tonight (WABC network, 7:30 p. m.).

Contralto with the Gypsies, Veronica Wiggins has chosen "By the Waters of Minnetonka," "When Two Who Love Are Parted," and "Mighty Lak' a Rose" for tonight's broadcast (WRC, 7:30 p. m.). The orchestral portion of the offering includes several old favorites.

PROCEEDINGS of the dinner to be given to Mayor James J. Walker tonight will be broadcast (WRC, 9 p. m.). The affair is in honor of Mayor Walker's fiftieth birthday and will be under auspices of Brooklyn members of the American Jewish joint distribution committee. The mayor will speak in behalf of the effort being made by the committee to raise $1,000,000 in New York City to relieve suffering among Jews in Eastern and Central Europe.

Virginia will honor the memory of another of its favorite sons by unveiling a bust of Zachary Taylor, twelfth President of the United States, in Statuary Hall, Capitol Building, Richmond, Va., tomorrow afternoon (WRC, 3:30 p. m.).

The programs of the Columbia camp concerts, a summer extension of the American School of the Air, will be started on July 1, over station WMAL.

FINLAND'S great composer, Jan Sibelius, will be honored by Howard Barlow and his symphony orchestra tomorrow night when the finale from First Symphony is played, (WMAL, 8:30 p. m.).

Opening ceremonies for the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto will be described by Milton J. Cross for the WJZ network tomorrow night. A 2,000-voice chorus will be a feature of the broadcast.

Turner Catledge, a White House correspondent, will describe "The Presidential Train En Route" from the studios of WMAL on Wednesday, 5 p. m.

THE vociferous applause lasting three and one-half minutes which President Hoover received during his recent address at Indianapolis may be a record for broadcast time consumed for this purpose. Many speakers have been warmly greeted, but the broadcasting companies fail to recall any more prolonged expression of approval.

Jane Interprets the Mode

Very smart afternoon frock of pale gray crepe de chine, with unusual twist of gray and blue crepe de chine at neck and waist. (Courtesy of Dupouy-Magnin, Paris.)

New York, June 21.

"THE vogue for combining brilliant colors in one costume has reached the point where even shoes are each of a different shade!" But don't be too startled, my dear, because that was all of five hundred years ago in merrie England! However, the first part of the quotation describes very accurately today's color situation. And though I haven't seen any signs of the second part being true, it mightn't be such a bad idea at that! Think of all the variety you could get by just having three pairs of shoes of six different colors, and recombining them at will! On the other hand, we have enough color worries as it is without the added complication of having each of our shoes of a different shade, haven't we?

And what's more, our color-combination worries now include having to reckon with a generous display of white added to two or three other colors. No, you can't hope to be really smart this summer without having an important detail of your attire in white—and not a filmy, flimsy bit of white either, but a solid, non-transparent, dazzling "whiteness."

An extremely smart way of expressing color chic in town clothes this summer, is in suits having the jacket and skirt contrasting in color and the blouse of white. One beautiful example of this is a brilliant royal blue skirt in a light ribbed wool, a jacket (unbelted, of course), in a lighter harmonizing blue and a blouse, sleeveless if you wish, in white pique or heavy white crepe. Or then again, both the jacket and blouse can be white and just the skirt of another color. And this choice is a very wise one, because the white jacketed suit is the very acme of summer chic. Or even the jacket and blouse can be in two different vivid shades worn with a black skirt and white accessories, if you're daring!

• • • •

Haven't you often wished that you could have something just a wee bit different to wear to your afternoon parties these summer days? Honestly, I, too, have wondered how long the same old idea of printed chiffon and bright colors was going to reign in the world of afternoon fashions—but I predict it won't be long when lovely ladies can have such charming, distinctive frocks as the one sketched today. Dupouy-Magnin made this of pale grey crepe de chine, with short, simple sleeves, a skirt of pleats incrusted to the rest of the frock in a point, and utterly new and unusual collar trimming of a twisted roll of grey and azure blue crepe de chine! This roll crosses over, after it stops being a collar, and emphasizes the snugly shaped waist of the frock.

O-o-o-h but you'll find restraint of color and line refreshing in warm weather! You can be much smarter! if you're not too fussy, and much more comfortable.

'N' if you're afraid that your afternoon frock is too, too plain, why not liven it up with some smart new accessory, like the necklace or belt of wavy gold strands, with occasional, large turquoise blue beads?

• • • •

Whether you're a thin sylph or a well-developed matron, you'd be surprised and shocked if you could see yourself on the beach or the dance floor without a brassiere! The unbound, floppy, unrestrained curve that the brassiereless state gives even the best of us is disgustingly ugly. And there's no excuse at all to go without one—simply send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for directions for making a brassiere for the backless beach or dance frock, one that you can't see, that's perfectly comfortable, and that's easy as pie to make!

• • • •

And of course you'll want to read the weekly Dare Fashion letter in the big Sunday Post.

Au Revoir!

Culbertson on Contract

By Ely Culbertson
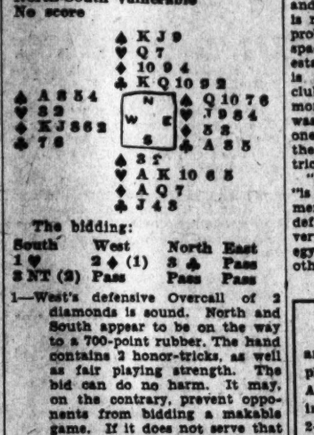
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

"TIME AND TIDE ON NO MAN WAITS."

TIME is one of the most important elements in the play of a hand at no trump. The race for the establishment of winning low cards before the enemy does likewise generally determines the success or failure of the contract. This is a very exciting contest when two long and strong suits are opposed. When the honors heading suits are in sequence, the attack is direct and the fate of the clash of force against force rests upon frontal attack.

At other times the opponents must attempt an encircling movement. This is true when the suit is not headed by a strong honor sequence and the Declarer's ten aces must be developed by finesses. The hand today is a case in point and vividly portrays the importance of Time factor in play. It was played in Duplicate at a recent tournament in Los Angeles. The scores varied all the way from a defeat of 200 points in one instance, to the making of 8-odd in another. Victory or defeat rested on the planning of the campaign and consequent play of the first card by the Declarer.

North-South vulnerable
No score



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	2 ♦ (1)	3 ♣	Pass
3 NT (2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—West's defensive Overcall of 2 diamonds is sound. North and South appear to be on the way to a 700-point rubber. The hand contains 2 honor-tricks, as well as fair playing strength. The bid can do no harm. It may, on the contrary, prevent opponents from bidding a makable game. If it does not serve that purpose it may point the way to the only safe defense. It is true that game with West's hand is remote against strength shown by an Opening bid; still, "guerilla tactics," when judiciously used, will make it harder for the enemy to get together.

2—South boldly carries the contract to game, encouraged by North's free Takeout. His hand contains more strength than 2½ honor-tricks, shown by his Opening bid, but the heart suit, lacking support by partner, is not strong enough to rebid.

West's choice of an Opening lead is fairly clearly marked. Hearts were bid by South originally. North has bid clubs. The spade suit has not been mentioned in the bidding. Perhaps that is the weak spot in South's armor, so West opens his fourth best spade in order to get a lead through the Ace, Queen in diamonds, which South apparently holds. South had a hard guess. "West holds one of the missing Aces," he reasoned, "but which one?" If it is the Ace of clubs and if East holds the Ace of spades, then nothing can be done as in the race of suit establishment East and West must then inevitably win. Place the Ace of spades in the West hand and the location of the Ace of clubs is relatively unimportant. There are probably no more than three losing spade tricks and if the clubs can be established before the diamond Ace is driven out, South can count 4 clubs, 3 hearts, 1 spade and 1 diamond for a total of 9 tricks. This was the way the hand was played at one table and the close reasoning of the South player resulted in 2 extra tricks by way of lagniappe.

"Strategy," remarks Joah Billings, "is getting there first with the most men." This may not be a complete definition of strategy, but it is a very accurate definition of the strategy underlying the play of this and other hands of like character.

What Today Means to You

"CANCER."

IF JUNE 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a. m. to 10 a. m. from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m., and from 5:30 p. m. to 7 p. m. The danger hours are from 6 a. m. to 7:40 a. m., and from 10 p. m. to midnight.

The astrological influences in force on June 22 are of a stimulating nature, and a day of intense activity is predicted—failures will be in the minority. Those who have psychic faculties of any degree will meet with curious experiences. Lucky time for social interests.

The child born on this June 22 will possess an ordinary personality, but will have many sterling qualities, which will assure it of more than average success during its adulthood. It will have an affectionate and a loyal nature, and will cling to its home ties. It will be a conscientious worker.

Born on June 22, you are an unobtrusive type of individual, and you seem to lack any outstanding personal characteristics. In spite of the negative impressions which you create, you are in possession of genuine ability and a great deal of efficiency. Never intruding, you are always on hand when needed. You always "make good" if placed in a position of responsibility, because you combine intelligence with conscientiousness and honesty, and firmly put your shoulder to the wheel. You believe in showing people what you can do, rather than wasting your time in idle boasting.

The affectional part of your "make up" is too deeply hidden behind a screen of indifference and reserve to be seen by the average individual, but those who are near or dear to you appreciate the warmth of your heart and the sincerity of your love. You never flatter people, and a compliment given by you is worth receiving. You are an inveterate and an intelligent reader, and you have a splendid memory. You try to keep abreast with the general news of the world, and your views are not narow or prejudiced.

The horoscopical picture of your home life is not too bright, as perfect harmony will not exist between you and the man or woman you may marry, until you both learn how to truly give and take. You will be an unselfish parent.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

CARING FOR IRIS AND PEONIES.

IRIS do take care of themselves; it would be foolish to deny this, for we frequently see beautiful clumps of iris about a property that has been without a tenant for years. But even though we know they are capable of getting along without any care, we also know from experience that they are responsive to any attention we may give them.

We should keep them well cultivated and free from weeds. We should not neglect to go over the ground where they are planted with a hoe and uproot all the weeds we find. All young plants should be given a mulch the first winter to prevent them from being heaved by the frost in the early spring. Early in the spring the dead tops should be removed. Every three or four years they should be dug, divided and reset.

The two main pests of the German varieties are the borer and a disease known as the "rot." The rot usually attacks the roots after the borers have injured them. The tiny borer enters the end of the leaf and eats its way down until it finally reaches the root of the plant.

The only remedy for borers is to look for them and, when you find them, to cut off the leaf. Decay and a blackening of the leaves of infested plants is a good indication of their presence. The full-grown larva is usually pinkish, with a brown head. It is about 2 inches long, with black spots on the sides.

Winter burning of all hollow-stemmed weeds is a practical means of controlling these pests. If they attack the rhizome and precipitate "rot," dig up the root, cut away diseased portion, dust the wound with powdered sulphur and replant.

Your peonies must from now on be given some attention. Do not neglect to water them twice each week and keep up a constant cultivation of the soil about their roots. Do not, when using the hoe, dig deeply or you may injure the feeding roots, which about this time are quite close to the surface. Be sure to feed these plants bonemeal in July and August. After applying the fertilizer, water the plants carefully so as to carry the food down to the hungry roots.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, PH.D.

THE family name "Morgan" is of Celtic origin. In a great many cases it stands for the Welsh "Ap Morgan," which means "the son of Morgan." There is some uncertainty as to the exact meaning of this Welsh personal name. Although it is sometimes translated as "mariner," its true meaning is probably "bright sea" or "white sea." In Ireland "Morgan" sometimes stands for the original "O Muireagain," although this Irish name has generally developed into such modern forms as "Murrigan" "Murricane," "Merrigan" and "Maragan." "O Muireagain" means "the descendant of Muireagan." "Murigean" is a diminutive form of various personal names beginning with "muir," meaning "the sea." Another Irish source of "Morgan" is "O Murchain," which means "the descendant of little Murchadh." The personal name "Murchadh" means "the sea warrior." In English records "Morgan" appears to be first recorded in the Hundred Rolls, in which a certain Walter Morgan is mentioned. In the United States and Canada some German families have adopted the name "Morgan" as the supposed English equivalent of "Morgen." The German family name "Morgen" means "the eastern place," and points out an original place of residence.

The family name "Merchant" is one of the relatively few names whose original meanings are indicated by their present forms. The older form "Marchant" (also spelled "Marchand") is still much more common than "Merchant." This name has come into English through the French and is derived ultimately from the Latin "mercari," meaning "to trade." The Latinized form "Mercator" is sometimes found in old records. Some of the many instances of this name in the Hundred Rolls are Thomas le Marchaunt, John le Marchant, William Marchand and Adam Mercator.

FRANCES M'DONALD

Strange Ways.

DEAR FRANCES M'DONALD: My husband has suggested that I put our problem up to you for help. It is beyond us. Here it is. We are both highly educated and accustomed to associating with the very finest. But due to depression he has accepted a position as consultant with a company here and we are more or less forced into social relations that are pretty hard to bear.

Please do not think us snobbish. It is not that. But the ways of the people are beyond belief. The women comment upon my clothes, my furniture, ask personal questions, such as where we came from, why we came, even last night whether either of us was ever married before! (My husband, it happens, was, and for some reason is sensitive about it). I am unable to cope with such people. They seem to me little better than talking animals. He told me from now on to go ahead and insult them. But they are, of course, the people connected with the firm—and big jobs are so very scarce. He is the product of four universities. High strung. Cultured to the finger tips. These people are just killing him. What can I do?

DISTRACTION.

What can you do? Learn to enjoy the experience of finding out how the "other half" lives! When I first left home I was as much amazed as you now are at the impertinence of the uncouth. At home we were never permitted to make the least criticism of each other, and under no circumstances to question each other's private affairs. Picture then my astonishment at meeting strangers who asked whether I manicured my own nails, what polish I used in the process, even commented upon my figure and the color of my hair—anything on earth that crossed their minds! But mother told me that was just fine. That was the best thing about leaving home—the great experience of meeting all kinds of people, and learning to find the best in each! Now I can smile at what once aroused my disgust. So will you. Call this the latest "university." It may prove the best.

You know most of the people in the world have had few social advantages. People who become personal are invariably, I have found, the product of overcrowded homes where personal privacy was as unknown and impossible as in a rabbit warren. And they could not possibly understand our reticences and reserves. We seem to them quite as strange as they do to us. Brought up as they were, we would make the same comments in the same unrestrained and unsophisticated manner. Given their limited social experience we could be quite as sure to make their mistakes and be quite as crude and blundering as they. Try to see them as people who are trying to show their interest—however superfluous that interest may be. Socially you can never have anything in common of course. But you can learn to not only bear with them, but to sympathize with all that their lack of polish tells of early privation and lack of culture. See as little of them as possible. The neighborly "calls" will be less frequent after a time. Just forget to repay a few. That is much better than hurting the feelings of people whose only offense is that they have lacked the advantages you have enjoyed. No well-bred human being ever becomes personal of course, but to call such a one no better "than a talking animal" is harsh beyond words. I have known the most kindly people who were socially untrained. Surely they were more than "talking animals." Your feeling has much to do with your husband's reaction to all this unpleasantness. If you will see it as, mother taught me to see it you will find that he will be less tense on the subject. After all is it of such moment? A trifling annoyance, a vast opportunity to learn—and to grow!

WEEK'S TRADE GAINS IN GENERAL OUTLOOK

Commodity Prices Show Hopeful Signs of Getting to Bottom Level.

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—While general business came more and more under the influence of summer lassitude during the past week, there were a few new developments which may profoundly influence the course of economic recovery.

The international outlook brightened perceptibly toward the close of the week, when President Hoover disclosed that he was carrying on nonpartisan conferences with political leaders "particularly directed toward strengthening the situation in Germany."

The German financial crisis, the severity of which may be measured by the Reichsbanks loss of nearly $130,000,000 in gold in a single week, had been a disturbing influence throughout the financial centers of the world.

Effect of Rail Petition.

Domestically, the filing of the petition of the railroads for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates was one of the most important financial and business developments of the year. Opinion as to the merits of the case of the carriers naturally varies widely, since a blanket increase in freight rates would affect in one way or another virtually the entire business fabric. Proponents of the project believe that it would be a powerful influence toward checking the decline in commodity prices and improving employment.

Commodity prices during the past fortnight, as measured by commonly quoted indices, have shown the most hopeful signs of bumping bottom in some three months. Of course, there is not means of determining whether the prospect of a revision of freight rates has had any bearing on the matter.

Fresh hope for improvement in the thoroughly demoralized petroleum industry was generated by the ending of the extremely costly price cutting war on the Pacific Coast. Furthermore, it was felt that real progress toward bringing the great East Texas pool under control was being made.

Retail Trade Weakens.

So far as general merchandising is concerned, the improvement in retail trade noted by the merchantile reviews in the previous week, was not well maintained, but inquiry for fall merchandise is developing in a manner distinctly encouraging to the wholesale trade.

Cotton mills have been feeling the influences of summer quiet, but the inquiry for worsted and wool goods for fall has been cheering. Many large mills are well employed, and many fabrics are not available for delivery on new orders until well into August. Shoe manufacturers continue fairly well occupied, and hide prices have strengthened. Also, some manufacturers of hardware and machinery report improvements.

In the heavy industries, steel continues to slacken, as generally forecast. In fact the decline has been somewhat more rapid than more optimistic observers had anticipated, and it is now acknowledged that midsummer shutdowns may bring the industry to such a state of complete quiet as that experienced last December.

Steel Sheets Prices.

Plans to improve the price structure, however, have brought announcements of increases in steel sheets for the third quarter, but the new prices remain to be tested.

Automobile manufacturing continues to slacken, and building contracts as reported by F. W. Dodge Corp. for the first half of June show a slump of about 10 per cent from the average for May. Mining remains severely depressed by low prices. Copper during the week was generally reduced to the basis of 8 cents a pound, domestic, a level at which it is questionable if any of the leading producers can show a profit.

Lumber, coal and most others of the heavy lines were quiet. In keeping with the seasonal trend, district improvement is not expected until August.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—New State and municipal bonds scheduled for award this week total $41,595,850, representing the needs of 82 communities. More than half of the total will be accounted for by two State issues, one of $16,500,000 on Wednesday for the State of Arkansas, and one of $8,600,000 on Tuesday for the State of Minnesota. This week's volume, the Bond Buyer reports, compares with $76,419,175 awarded last week in this classification, and a weekly average of $41,519,766 for the year to date.

Evidences of a rise in industrial activity during the last few months are now so definite as to be unmistakable, Electrical World reports in its monthly survey of electrical energy consumption in 3,800 mills and factories throughout the United States. The low point in industry was reached in December and January. May's index of manufacturing activity, according to the survey report, is 13 per cent above January's level. In 1929 it was only 3 per cent above, and in 1930 it was 2 per cent below.

Current average yield on all active cash dividend paying common stocks is not only close to the 1921 peak, but is actually higher than the top yield during any other depression in the last 35 years, an analysis by Moody's shows. The June 1 average of 9.72 per cent for 335 stocks compares with 9.92 per cent in August, 1921; 7.15 per cent in July, 1914; 9.53 per cent in the panic of 1907 and only 5.94 per cent in April, 1897. More than 85 per cent of the stocks in the present list are industrials, while in 1897 industrials and utilities each represented only about 15 per cent of the total number, with rails accounting for the other 70 per cent.

O. H. Simonds, who for the last eight years has been associated with the Electric Bond & Share Co., as operating sponsor of certain of their gas and electric properties in the Mississippi Valley, including United Gas Corporation, has been elected president of Appalachian Gas Corporation. Mr. Simonds, who leaves Electric Bond & Share Co., to assume his new duties July 1, succeeds H. G. Scott, who remains a director.

Southern Alkali Corporation plans the erection of a $10,000,000 plant at Corpus Christi, Tex., according to James C. Kennedy, president of Central & Southwest Utilities Co. When the plant is running at full capacity, Mr. Kennedy said, it will consume approximately 37,500,000 cubic feet of gas daily, 2,500 tons of salt, 2,500 tons of limestone and great quantities of sulphur, all found in south Texas.

WEEK'S BONDS GAIN AS MARKET RALLIES

German Issues Lead Drive to Better Prices; Prior Losses Recovered.

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—The most important developments in the bond market last week occurred at the close of the period, when a general rise, in which German obligations scored the largest gains, developed.

Previous to the belated movement, the general trend had been uncertain. This latter fact is emphasized by the average closing price of 30 representative issues, consisting of ten bonds each of industrial railroad and public utility bonds, which was 94.5, compared with 94.6 seven days earlier. All of the three constituent averages closed higher on Saturday, which merely canceled earlier narrow declines.

The news of the plans of the Hoover administration to provide aid for Germany furnished a strong stimulant for the obligations of that country on Saturday. The 5½s of the national government of 1968 were unusually active then and jumped 5¼ points, in addition to gradual gains earlier in the week.

Turnover Is Small.

The turnover in other German issues was not so large, but strength in them was general. Other foreign issues, particularly those of European borrowers, shared in the upward movement to a lesser extent.

Railroad loans turned firm toward the end of the week, a movement which merely recovered earlier declines in many instances. After the close on Saturday dispatches from Washington reported that the Interstate Commerce Commission had asked for further details from the railroads concerning their application for higher freight rates.

Industrial and public utility loans crept upward, but the movement was so gradual as often to escape notice. Loans of the United States Government fluctuated back and forth without a definite trend most of the time on moderate activity. An interesting event occurred on Thursday, when bids for $23,000,000 of 3½ per cent serial bonds of New Jersey were opened, and only $3,000,000 of them were sold.

State's Credit High.

There is no question that the credit of that State has high standing. Bids received for the unsold $20,000,000 of bonds, whose proceeds were to be used for highways, totaled only $14,000,000. Wall street's interpretation of this result was that the required minimum bid of part for 3½ per cent bonds approximated the retail market too closely to make the issue attractive. A meeting of State officials to arrange for another sale is scheduled for next Tuesday.

Public offerings of bonds last week totaled $79,228,000 compared with $21,910,000 the preceding week and $143,212,500 for the corresponding period a year ago. State and municipal issues totaling $34,633,000 totaled more than those of any other group. The sale of all the New Jersey issues would have increased that total. Public utility offerings amounted to $31,000,000. Fairly large municipal and public utility issues are expected in the near future.

The general advance of Saturday will have to continue for some time, however, before the market is strong enough to permit extensive flotations of issues of secondary standing.

Stock Quotations Service Speeded

New Exchange Building to Inaugurate System in New York Today.

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—The New York Curb Exchange has installed in its new building a completely modern central quotation system, in conjunction with which a dial telephone system has been installed through which brokerage offices may obtain bid and asked quotations on stocks.

The new building is scheduled to be formally dedicated about July 15.

The new quotation system, which will be placed in operation tomorrow, consists of a special quoting department which is constantly informed of changes in prices by telephone from the floor of the exchange. The system also comprises an especially designed mechanical call distribution arrangement, whereby subscribing brokers may obtain the latest quotations affecting all securities listed on the exchange from their own offices through the dialing of predetermined codes, with established telephone connections with particular quotation operators having access to information directly from the trading floor. Heretofore, when quotations were requested from outside sources, a messenger had to be sent to the trading post.

It would cost $2.250 to send postcards to all the readers that can be reached any morning by Post Classified Ads.

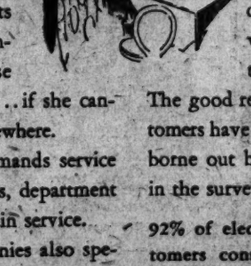
On a PAR with Severely Competitive Service


WHEN a woman enters a retail shop, she wants courteous attention, reasonable assortment to choose from and prompt delivery . . . if she cannot get these she goes elsewhere.
In other words, she demands service . . . that is why retail shops, department stores, groceries specialize in service.
Gas and electric companies also specialize in service. While not under the same competitive necessity in all their activities, utilities provide service on a par with retail stores. This was brought out in a recent survey of 4,000 representative gas and electric customers residing in 79 communities of 5 states.
The question asked was:
"Which do you think gives you better service on the whole, retail stores or electric company; retail stores or gas company?".
Replies were:
Retail stores 14.1%
Electric company 15.2
Same 70.7
Retail stores 14.3%
Gas company 15.3
Same 70.4
This favorable comparative showing of electric and gas companies is the more remarkable in view of the severe competition among retail merchants and the excellent service which they must give to win and hold customers.
The good relations electric and gas customers have with their companies is also borne out by replies to other questions in the survey:
92% of electric and 89.2% of gas customers consider the companies fair in their dealings.
98.2% of electric and 97.6% of gas customers think the companies' managements good, excellent, or fair.
97.2% of electric and 96.3% of gas customers have satisfactory dealings with the companies serving them.
Satisfactory relations with customers and a rate of growth and prospects for growth that appear to be equalled by no other important industry, make sound utility securities attractive to investors.
The Associated Gas and Electric System, a major unit in the industry, has had a steadily mounting growth in gross and net earnings. During the last five years, the margin of earnings for interest requirements on an overall basis before depreciation has increased from 1.84 times to 2.15 times.

INDIANS' HOMERS BEAT NATS, 3-1, AS MACKS WIN

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

BOBBY JONES' voluntary retirement from competitive golf coincident with the birth of Big Boy, the bigger and lighter ball, may amount to what historians dote on referring to as a new era—in the royal and ancient sport of pounding the gutta-percha pellet around the pasture lands.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-one in our present highly respected Gregorian calendar well may come to be known as the year 1 A. J.—After Jones—in golf, if the present discontent and unrest over the U. S. G. A. ukase that decreed Big Boy as the only lawful ball for tournament play subsidies under the sheer weight of time and realization of the helplessness of the man who plays the game.

The line of demarcation in the new golf calendar is formed of equal parts of Jones' decision to retire and the legalization of Big Boy.

New Order Is Here

Jones' retirement alone might well have signaled the close of an era in golf in the light of his conquests here and abroad unapproached by any other golfer in the history of the sport that reaches back into the fourteenth century. But the arrival of Big Boy has hailed beyond question a new order in the game what with complaints by even our best pros of Big Boy's antics in the wind and the walls of the garden variety of golfer at Big Boy's penchant for rimming the cup on his putts.

Unless Jones recants and decides to enter the open tournaments for which he still is eligible, every important golf event of the next few years will be open to the suspicion that the outcome might have been far different with Jones competing. To the millions who recognize Jones as the peer of them all, every tournament carrying a national or international title will bear the taint of Jones' absence from the competition.

Just how far-reaching the Atlantan's withdrawal from the competitive phase of the game will be, time alone will tell.

May Belittle Jones

Conversely, there is the possibility that Big Boy, if sustained in time by the golfing public and the U. S. G. A., as is indicated, will have the effect of detracting from Jones' achievements.

If the best of the golfers of the present crop and of future generations fail to equal the records set by Jones, there will always be those who can belittle the Atlantan's feats with the observation that Jones' triumphs were the result of the smaller ball, more controllable in the wind and more effective on the greens.

The new generation of golfers can consign Jones to a former era of golf that can not be justifiably compared with the game of their day as a result of the disparity in the behavior of the ball which Jones had at his command and the bigger and lighter ball that has been decreed. Jones may still be a hero of golf legend, the best of his time, but his greatness can always be regarded with the suspicion that he might not have been able to do so well with Big Boy.

Remember Cravath

This column can go back into sports history to substantiate its theory of fallen idols. Baseball offers the most pertinent example. With the introduction of the lively baseball, the greatest batters of the dead ball era were supplanted by the Ruths, the Wilsons, the Gehrigs and the Kleins.

There is no claim that Babe Ruth can not hit a baseball farther than any ball player past or present, but the introduction of the lively ball had the effect of obscuring a really great hitter like Gavvy Cravath, of the Phillies, who was able to lead the major leagues one season with a mere twelve home runs and gain recognition as the greatest home-run hitter of his time.

Ask the baseball fan to name the best hitters of baseball. Cravath's twelve home runs with the dead ball gain him little consideration in the light of Ruth's record-breaking 60. There was a chap named Buck Freeman who held the American League record of 19 before Ruth came along. He wouldn't be mentioned either in a modern list of the truly great. But he was the best of his time. But conditions are different. There ought to be a moral in that for those who swear by Bobby Jones.

Stars Await Wimbledon Opening

New Set of Champions Due in Tennis Starting Today.

Shields Meets Spence in Debut on Famous Center Court.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 21 (A.P.).—The lush green turf of Wimbledon is ready for the 1931 British lawn tennis championships, starting tomorrow.

By the night of July 4 an entirely new set of champions will have been crowned. Helen Wills Moody and Big Bill Tilden are letting the women's and men's singles titles go by default. Only John Van Ryn, of the champion doubles combination of Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, is here for this year's play. The women's doubles team of Mrs. Moody and Elizabeth Ryan, winners in 1930, also is broken up and so is the mixed doubles combination of Miss Ryan and J. B. Crawford, of Australia.

Strange faces and stranger names are bidding for British titles this time. For instance, there are Japan's new Davis Cup aces, Sato and Aoki, but Van Chim and Van Giao are stranger newcomers to Wimbledon—all the way from Annam, in [illegible]-ith Chins. Then there are Kukuljevic, from Jugoslavia, not forgetting Ignace Tloczynski, from Pland, as a sample of the cosmopolitan makeup of the entry list.

Shields Meet Good Player.

America's new star, Frank Shields, of New York, will meet the formidable match player, P. D. B. Spence, of South Africa in the curtain raiser on the famous center court tomorrow. Jiro Sato will play Vernon Kirby, young South African star. Henri Cochet, French ace, who has had only a couple of day's practice here, meets good opposition in Nigel Sharpe, of Great Britain.

With her battery of six men stars, Frederick Perry, H. W. (Bunny) Austin, John S. Olliff, J. Colin Gregory, H. G. N. Lee and George Patrick Hughes, and three girls aces, Betty Nuthall, Eileen Bennett Whittingstall and Phyllis Mudford, Great Britain looks forward at last to winning some of the honors that have been going abroad for so many years that the oldest member of the all-England Club hardly can remember when the men's singles title last stayed at home. Historians say it was 22 years ago that Arthur Gore won the title.

It is doubtful whether America can repeat the clean sweep of last year but Shields, Wood, George Lott, Van Ryn and Gregory Mangin are an able team while sturdy Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., may fill Mrs. Moody's place if she can whip Miss Nuthall.

Cardinals and Braves Split in Double-Header

Boston, June 21 (A.P.).—The Cards and Braves divided a double-header today, the Tribe taking the opener, 6 to 2, while Burleigh Grimes shut them out, 1-to 0, in the nightcap. Pepper Martin's home run in the sixth accounted for the only run of the second game.

Frankhouse and Brandt held the champions to five hits in the first game, while the Braves collected nine. Frankhouse struck out seven, but tired toward the close and was relieved by Brandt. Wes Schulmerich knocked in three of the Braves' runs.

Grimes held the locals to five hits in the final to score his ninth victory against three losses. Seibold limited the Cards to six blows, but Martin's circuit smash proved enough to win. The teams split even in the six-game series.

Watt, Local Boy, Sought Police Job Last Winter

A determination to give his sore pitching arm one last try before acknowledging the end of his baseball career robbed the Metropolitan Police Department of Washington of the services of Frank Watt, who held the Cincinnati Reds to five hits yesterday and turned in a 5-to-1 victory for the Phillies.

Watt, one of the four brothers who have long been prominent in sandlot and semiprofessional baseball in Washington, decided last winter after an indifferent career in organized baseball, to quit the game and made application to the Police Department here for a place on the force.

BROWNS BEAT YANKEES TWICE

Home Runs by Gehrig and Ruth Futile; Scores, 9-7, 8-2.

ST. LOUIS, June 21 (A.P.).—The lowly Browns came to life here today and defeated the New York Yankees in both ends of a double-header. The Browns, with Wally Stewart pitching, won the opener, 9 to 7, and the nightcap 8 to 2, behind young Wallace Hebert's fine twirling.

Stewart limited the Yankees to seven hits but three of them were good for the circuit. Lou Gehrig hit his fourteenth homer of the season and Babe Ruth his thirteenth. The other homer was by Tony Lazzeri. Roy Sherid was the losing pitcher in the opener, although George Pipgras started.

In the nightcap, the Browns found Vernon Gomez easy and drove him from the mound early in the third inning. Lary of the Yankees and Ferrell, of the Browns hit homers.

1932 OLYMPIC PROGRAM NAMED

135 Distinct Events on Pretentious 16-Day Coast Card.

LOS ANGELES, June 21 (A.P.).—Overshadowing anything of its kind heretofore held in the United States for sheer display of athletic man power, the pretentious sixteen-day program of the 1932 Olympic Games was announced here today by the Los Angeles organizing committee.

The schedule of the tenth Olympiade, as it will be called, was released following cablegram approval from Count de Baillet-Latour, president of the international Olympic committee, from Lausanne, Switzerland.

American Sports Public More Dignified and Calm Than in the Olden Days

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.
Special to The Washington Post.

WE WERE sitting and talking to one another in a room at the old Nelson House, a hotel which apparently antedates the Civil War, the night of the big rowboat competition on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie. By nature an optimist, I nevertheless ventured the notion that the American people were becoming more law-abiding and more dignified year by year, taking the prevailing calm and quiet as my example and comparing it with some of the historic ructions of the old days. It was true that there was some mild lawlessness going on at the time, denoted by occasional sour crescendoes of song pouring out through the transoms of some of the rooms.

"Just a gigolo-o-o, everywhere I go-o-o," conflicted with "Anchors Aweigh," babbled by somebody who did not know the words. Incidentally, I would be unjust to blame the United States Naval Academy for all the furious, foul singing of "Anchors Aweigh" in the last couple of years. It used to be a more or less private song.

As I understand the story of its great spread, Rudy Vallee first resurrected the Maine Stein Song, which is a Harvard song turned inside out, as you will note when they are played in duet on one keyboard, and some alert promoter of music, knowing "Anchors Aweigh" for a better dancing piece, obtained the rights to the same and made it public.

"Just a gigolo-o-o, everywhere I go-o-o."

"Sail, Navy, down the field. . ."

"It's a quiet night," I remarked. "No bottles crashing into the street. Nobody throwing bricks through store windows, as the ebullient young man did in the historic celebration of '05. What has happened to the ebullience?"

"The ebullience is still there" said Mr. Lawrence Perry, Princeton '06 the perpetual sophomore. "Take that night after a football game in Los Angeles just a few years ago. 'Twenty-eight, or was it '29, along in there? Why there was some of the greatest ebullience this country has ever known. They started by throwing bottles out of the window. Then

Woodmont's Golfers Are Winners

Men, Women Beat Richmond Groups by Wide Margins.

Golf Events Results From Various Capital Courses.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

GOLFERS of the Woodmont Club, both men and women, proved themselves superior to the players who came to Washington from the Lakeside Club, Richmond, Va., to compete in a tournament which began on Saturday and ended yesterday afternoon. The only consolation for the visitors was the defeat of Joseph D. Kaufman, president of the Woodmont Club, by Adrian Benheim and Henry Gunst, president and former president of the Lakeside Club.

At the close of the matches last Saturday the Woodmont Team led by 14 points as against 4 for Lakeside and this advantage not only held in the matches played yesterday, but was increased until Woodmont scored 35 points as against 19 for Woodmont. The matches played yesterday resulted as follows:

Howard Nordlinger (W) defeated Louis Michaels (R), 3 to 0. Max Weyl (W) defeated Henry Wallenstein (R) 3 to 0. William G. Rich (W) defeated Mark Mittledorfer (R), 3 to 0. Edgar Kaufman (R) defeated Robert Baum (W), 2 points. Alton Joel (R) won from Henry Kaufman (W), 3 to 0. Fulton Brylawski (W) defeated Alvin Hutzler (R), 3 to 0. Dr. S. B. Gottlieb (W) and Leroy Stern (R), all even, 1½ to 1½. Gilbert Hahn (W) and J. H. Cohen (R), all even, 1½ to 1½. Leopold V. Freudberg (W) and Maurice Strauss (R), all even, 1½ to 1½. Dr. M. B. Discher (W) defeated F. F. Galeher (R), 2 to 1. Walter Nordlinger (W) and Irving Greentree (R), 1½ to 1½. Leon Nelson (R) defeated Morris Simon (W), 3 to 0.

The Woodmont women players defeated their Richmond competitors by the wide margin of 16½ points to 7½ points. At the close of play on Saturday afternoon the Woodmont players were in the lead, 7½ to 4½, and yesterday they added to their lead. The matches yesterday resulted as follows:

Mrs. Jerome Meyer (W) defeated Mrs. Edgar Kauffman, 2 points to 1. Mrs. Jack Shulman (W) defeated Mrs. M. L. Strauss (R), 2 to 1. Mrs. Theodore Peyser (W) defeated Mrs. Irving Greentree (R), 2 to 1. Mrs. Gilbert Hahn (W) defeated Mrs. S. Ullman (R), 3 to 2.

The match between Arthur B. Thorn, Woodmont professional, and Allan Brodie, Lakeside professional, resulted in a victory for the former, 6 and 5.

Three Players Tie At Beaver Dam.

The blind bogey tournament at the Beaver Dam Club yesterday resulted in a multitude of ties. The first lucky number was 78, which was tied by three players, as follows: H. R. Devilbiss, 103—25—78; Thomas Marconitz, 108—30—78, and Frank Gerardi, 91—13—78. The second winning number was 75, with another triple tie as follows: W. A. Johns, 101—26—75; L. L. Middleton, 97—22—75, and S. R. Speelman, 90—15—75. The third winning number was 77, for which there was a sextuple tie, as follows: G. F. Beyer, 95—18—77; R. M. Lewis, 93—16—77; Donald Buckingham, 88—11—77; F. M. Jones, 112—35—77; D. G. Morris, 87—10—77; and W. G. Henderson, 97—20—77.

Nearly one hundred members of the Columbia Country Club journeyed to the Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday for a get-together party. Friendly matches were arranged, with Fred. McLeod, professional at Columbia, and Dave Thomson, professional at Washington, leading the procession. No scores were kept, but in the language of D'Arcy, Banagan, assistant professional at the Columbia Club, who acted as chief marshal for the Columbia visitors, a swell time was had by all.

Kenwood Women To Play.

Women players of the Kenwood Club will compete tomorrow in the women's club championship, eighteen holes, medal play. Among the entrants listed yesterday were Miss Virginia Williams, Miss Virginia Pope, Mrs. E. A. Rule, Mrs. C. S. Peal, Miss Agnes Little, Miss Alice Merchant, Mrs. E. D. Hayes, Miss Louise Hayden, Miss Marcia Haskell, Mrs. B. V. Cain, and Mrs. Paul Wooten.

The sweepstake tournament at the Kenwood Club yesterday, eighteen holes, medal play, handicap, was won by George C Brown with a card of 79—8—71. Fred A Nelson, 94—22—72, was runner-up.

Grove Called In as Macks Win, 6-5

Stops White Sox With Bases Full in 9th; Earnshaw Slugged.

Todt Drives Home 4 Runs; 2 Errors Aid to Athletics.

CHICAGO, June 21 (A.P.).—Philadelphia made it three in a row over the White Sox this afternoon by taking a close one, 6 to 5. A Chicago rally in the ninth that filled the bases, with the winning run on second, was throttled by Bob Grove, who relieved Earnshaw to make Grube pop out, and Heniine fan.

Earnshaw was in trouble all afternoon, allowing nine walks, and hitting one batter, but the Hose were unable to hit with men on bases, having 13 men left on the sacks. Three times they were retired with the bases full.

Thomas Credited With Defeat.

Thomas, Faber and Moore hurled for Chicago, Thomas being the loser. Two errors by Luke Appling led to the scoring of two Philadelphia runs in the eighth.

Phil Todt batted home three of the winners' runs, and Al Simmons, honored by fans from Milwaukee before the game, came through with three singles.

Robins Stop Cubs, 7-6, On Lopez's Hit in Ninth

Brooklyn, June 21 (A.P.).—Brooklyn and Chicago struggled for almost three hours today to win the rubber contest of a five game series and the Robins finally clinched a 7 to 6 decision in the last half of the ninth.

Both Warneke and Phelps, starting pitchers, were knocked out. Phelps entered the ninth with a three-run lead and was replaced by Vance after Hornsby hit his tenth home run of the season and Wilson walked with one out.

Hemsley doubled off Vance and Grimm's fifth hit of the afternoon drove in the two tying runs.

3,000 CROWD SEES SCHMELING AT BEST FIGHTING WEIGHT

Improvement Is Noted by Edgren

Ring Authority Says German Is Faster Than Ever.

Joe Jacobs Is Happy as Champion Toys With Mates.

By CHARLES DUNKLEY.

CONNEAUT LAKE PARK, Pa., June 21 (A.P.).—Already pared down to his fighting weight of 190 pounds, Max Schmeling breezed through his fifteenth day of ring work today in preparation for his world's heavyweight championship fight with Young Stribling in Cleveland July 3.

Tomorrow the title-holder will rest in preparation for his final week of boxing, starting Tuesday.

Schmeling worked out for nine rounds before 3,100 sweltering spectators, who stood beneath a broiling sun in his outdoor arena.

Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, rubbed his hands with glee as the 3,100 passed through the turnstile, for each deposited $1 in cash for the privilege of watching the bronzed German go through his paces.

Edgren Says German Hits Faster.

Bob Edgren, chairman of the California boxing commission and noted fistic authority, was among the boxing celebrities to watch every move that Schmeling made. Edgren said Schmeling was hitting faster than the Teuton did before his match with Jack Sharkey last summer and that he punched effectively, short and straight, with his right hand. Schmeling boxed six rounds, pounded the heavy bag for one round and went through two of calisthenics making nine in all.

He boxed the first two with George Panka, Pittsburgh heavyweight. Schmeling started off slowly, allowing Panka to nail him with a few left hooks and jabs then cracked the Pittsburgher with a short right to the jaw with the result Panka blew up.

Steve Simon, a long, lanky heavyweight from Erie, Pa., provided the speed for the German in their two-round session. Simon was fast in shooting left hooks and jabs and lost no time in running away from Schmeling's attack. Schmeling was kind to Tony Marullo, the shopworn veteran of New Orleans, in their two rounds.

The champion will do no work tomorrow unless playing golf is work for him. Starting Tuesday he will begin his last week of boxing and plans to finish all work with the gloves a week hence.

Stribling Becomes Restless As Title Match Nears

Geauga Lake, Ohio, June 21 (A.P.).—The title shot is still almost two weeks away, but Young Bill Stribling is ready now for his fifteen-round duel with Max Schmeling in the mammoth new municipal stadium on the shores of Lake Erie in Cleveland July 3.

Restlessness and a touch of irritability are always the first signs of the approaching edge of physical perfection in an athlete and today the rugged heavyweight challenger from Macon, Ga., paced his training camp looking for something to do. His workouts are held at night to escape the searing heat wave gripping the Midwest and to reproduce as closely as possible conditions as they will be in the stadium the night of the title fray.

Stribling, never far from topnotch condition, is a picture of perfectly trained, finely tuned athlete as he mingles constantly with the crowds that flock over the week-end to the camp on Geauga Lake, in the center of a pleasure resort 27 miles outside of Cleveland.

So close is Stribling right now to fighting edge that his weight, at 189 pounds, is only 2 or 3 pounds more than he expects to scale July 3. He has set 186 pounds as his minimum weight, 4 more than he ever carried before for a major battle. In Miami two years ago Stribling weighed 182 pounds for his match with Jack Sharkey.

Gallagher to Fight At Cleveland July 3

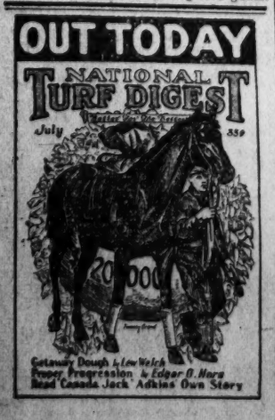
Marty Gallagher, former Washington fistic pride, now making Boston the base of his operations, will appear on the Stribling-Schmeling world championship card at Cleveland on July 3, his brother, Jimmy, announced here last night.

Jimmy Gallagher stated he had received word from Dan Carroll, Marty's manager, that the Foggy Bottom lad will meet Charles Retzlaw, sensational Chicago heavyweight, in a ten-round bout. Retzlaw recently knocked out Jack Gagnon, of Boston, and about two months ago gained a decision over Johnny Risko.

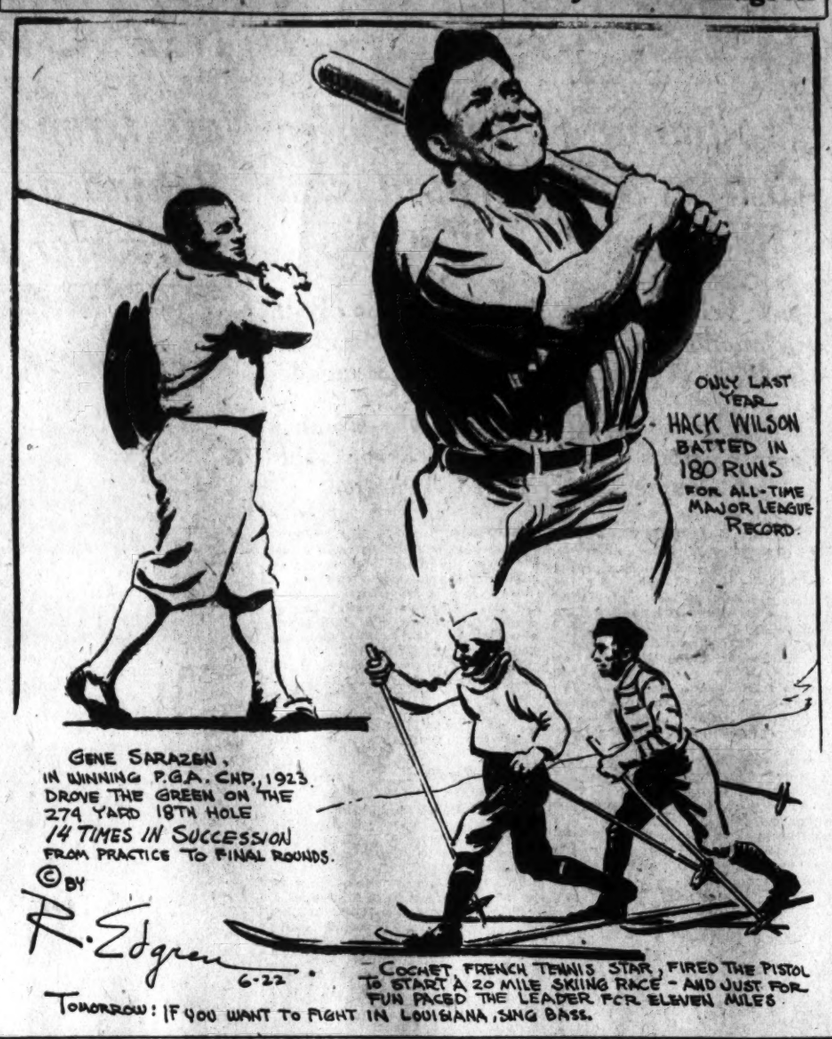
Gallagher will fight tomorrow night in Portland, Me., engaging Harold Mays over the twelve-round route.

HARRIMAN'S REDS WIN.

Port Washington, N. Y., June 21 (A.P.).—W. Averill Harriman's Reds defeated Tommy Hitchcock's whites in a high goal polo match here today, 11-7. Earle A. S. Hopping, young internationalist, was the outstanding player on the field, scoring five goals.



MIRACLES OF SPORTS. —By Robert Edgren



Boots and Saddle's

—Washington Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

ENTERING the final week at the popular Washington Park course, a well-arranged program has been carded for the Monday patrons. The Oak Park Purse, an allowance affair, for three-year-olds and upward at the six-furlong sprint distance, will feature the day's sport. This number, fifth on the card, carries a purse value of $1600.

Fourteen highly-regarded speedsters have been entered in the overnight feature. MARTIS from the D. Bentham stable has been freshened up by a brief since his effort on opening day. His trials stamp him as a fit steed and he is selected to lead his rivals to the wire. IRONSIDES has turned in some speedy works and should force the pace. ZACAWEISTA, in the Three D's stable, was shut off in his last start and with better luck should contest the issue with the top two.

FIRST RACE—In the opener a limit field of maiden two-year-olds will face the barrier to battle it out over the five-furlong route. ESSENTIAL, from the C. W. Moore barn, was unfortunate last start. He was blocked in the stretch and just finished out of the money. The Moore juvenile is capable of graduating from this band of nonwinners.

SECOND RACE—Another group of 20 platers have been named to start in the 6-furlong dash of the second number. The Jones Stock Farm's fleet mare, TADDYWAWA, winner of her last start at this track, is well suited by the conditions and should duplicate.

THIRD RACE—The customary large entry list was received in the third encounter, which brings together 20 juvenile fillies, which will be dispatched over the 5-furlong dash. F. Rucker's FLUENT displayed exceptional speed in winning her maiden effort, and, with that effort to recommend her, she should annex the purse here.

FOURTH RACE—Eleven high-class platers will contest the $1,400 purse of the fourth heat, which attracted some speedy routers in this mile and 70-yard struggle. LAHOR, owned by the Jones Stock Farm, scored impressively in his last winning effort and under the same conditions is selected over his opponents.

SIXTH RACE—In the sixth event, another limit field of twenty 3-year olds and upward, will match strides over the mile and an eighth route. PLAYFELLOW'S DREAM has the class of the field of claimers and should romp to an easy victory.

SEVENTH RACE—WEE DROP, from the A. A. Baroni Stable is dropped into an admirable spot in the mile and an eighth of the concluding number and should lead from flag fall to finish.

WEST POINT TRIUMPHS.

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—Given a three-goal handicap, the United States Military Academy's polo four, which won the intercollegiate handicap tournament yesterday, defeated the first division team, 7 to 5, at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, today.

DULL WEEK IN FIGHT CIRCLES

Suarez and Petrolle Meet; Canzoneri Faces Perlick.

NEW YORK, June 21 (A.P.).—The lightest boxing schedule in recent weeks finds most of the promised action centered in the New York district and out on the Pacific Coast.

The headline bout of the week will pit Justo Suarez, Argentine lightweight contender, against hard-socking Billy Petrolle, the "Fargo Express," in a ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden Thursday night.

This match will mark the opening of Suarez's second North American campaign. The Argentine, one of the most durable of the lightweights, whipped Joe Glick, Herman Perlick, Bruce Flowers, Ray Miller and Louis (Kid) Kaplan on his first trip here last year and looms as one of the most dangerous challengers for Tony Canzoneri's world crown. Petrolle, in his last two starts, broke even with Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver welterweight. He looms as the most dangerous opponent Suarez has met.

Canzoneri Fights Nontitle Bout.

Canzoneri himself will see some action against Herman Perlick, of the Kalamazoo Perlicks, at New Haven, Conn., Thursday night, in a ten-round nontitle bout.

Out in the Far West, Fidel Labara, Los Angeles featherweight, will battle Claude Varner, Bakersfield, Calif., at Hollywood Friday in his first start since his disappointing showing against Bat Battalino in New York.

Bouts on the National schedule include:

MONDAY—At Boston, Braves Field, Jack Russell, Cambridge, Mass., vs. Darcy White, New Bedford, Mass., lightweights, 10; At Los Angeles, Al Herrera, Los Angeles, vs. Eddie Murdock, Denver, welterweights, 10; at Portland, Oreg., Young Firpo, Burke, Idaho, vs. Wesley Ketchell, Portland, light-heavyweights, 10; at Newark, N. J., Jack Kid Berg, England, vs. Tony Lambert, Newark, lightweights, 10; at New York, Madison Square Garden, Jackie Purvis, Indianapolis, vs. Mike Payan, Arizona, welterweights; Sid Silas, New York, vs. Willard Brown, Indianapolis, welterweights, and Happy Atherton, Indianapolis, vs. Eli (Tiger) Smith, England, bantamweights, each 6; at New York, Dexter Park, Willard Dix, Los Angeles, vs. Bob Olin, New York, light-heavyweights, 10.

TUESDAY—At New York, Coney Island Stadium, George Smith, Newark, N. J., vs. Ralph Picucello, New York, heavyweights, 10.

WEDNESDAY—At Oakland, Calif., Roberto Roberti, Italy, vs. Eddie Orze, Negro, Oakland, heavyweights, 10.

THURSDAY—At New York, Madison Square Garden, Justo Suarez, Argentine, vs. Billy Petrolle, Fargo, N. Dak., lightweights, 10; Archie Bell, Brooklyn, vs. Vidal Gregorio, Spain, featherweights, 8; At New Haven, Conn., Tony Canzoneri, New York, vs. Herman Perlick, Kalamazoo, Mich., lightweights, 10 (nontitle); Jerry Emard, Holyoke, Mass., vs. Henry Perlick, Kalamazoo, lightweights, 8.

FRIDAY—At Hollywood, Calif., Claude Varner, Bakersfield, Calif., vs. Fidel Labarba, Los Angeles, featherweights, 10; at San Francisco, Gaston Lesserde, France, vs. Battling Dozier, Wichita, Kans., Negro, welterweights, 10.

U. S. SPORT PUBLIC BECOMES DIGNIFIED

they progressed to the small furniture. Then they tried to throw the big upholstered pieces out, but they wouldn't go through the frames. So they took them apart and threw them. It was pretty hard work without any tools, but they were full of ebullition, and willing hands make easy work, as I believe the maxim goes. They even dismembered a couple of pianos, too, and threw them out, and finally, having no more furniture large enough to command their attention, the boys rolled up an innocent bystander in a mattress, tied him well and hurled the mattress out of a high window, the sixth story, I believe."

Remembers Something Of Kind.

"You don't tell me," I exclaimed, much cheered. "Of course, I remember something of the kind happening in Louisville on Derby night a few years ago. Some heavy object of furniture went out the window. Some said it was a pool table and others said it was just a bed that fell out accidentally. But the ebullience was not collegiate. The boys were members of a party of sinister character from Cicero, Ill., who had come down in a special train of private cars, with those solid gold grill tailboards on them, to enjoy the sport of kings. Naturally, they would not respect the law.

"And I remember one pleasant afternoon in Houston, Tex., about three years ago, when the Democratic party had gathered to name their man for the quadrennial solemn referendum. The elevators were crowded at all times and people were being passed by. Suddenly there came a sound of small arms at the elevator landing and people rushed out of the rooms to discover a gentleman, standing there with an empty six-gun and six punctures in the glass doors of the shaft. But he was a prominent politician, and naturally one need not fear that politicians will respect the law. Moreover, public opinion justified the protest. The elevator service was terrible."

"Was he suffering from ebullition?" Mr. Perry inquired.

"Crowded to the gills with it," I said. "He was a politician."

"I remember, also, an evening at a country club where one of our great scoring machines was stopping the night before a big football game in the East. The people were dining and dancing on the marble floor surrounding the swimming pool, and one young man threw an elderly waiter into the pool. The water was cold and the waiter was very blue as he made the stairs and started to climb out. But the young man threw him back in again several times. Then the waiter had a heart attack and almost died.

"But that was at a country club, frequented by the best people, so it did not mean anything. They aren't supposed to respect the law."

Heavyweights in Feature At Ft. Washington Tonight

Huttick and Denning Clash; Buell Meets Landers; 2 Other Matches on Program.

FINAL (10 ROUNDS).
Arthur Huttick, 182, vs. Jack Denning, 187.
SEMIFINAL (8 ROUNDS).
Eddie Buell, 122, vs. Sailor Landers, 120.
MAIN PRELIMINARY (6 ROUNDS).
George Goldsby, 143, vs. Harry Green, 147.
OPENER (6 ROUNDS).
Roddy Davis, 135, vs. Soldier Clark, 137.
Referee—Charley Short.
Announcer—Jimmy Lake.
First bout—8:30 p. m.

WASHINGTON fight fans are due for a change in menu tonight when heavyweights appear in the feature bout of the Fort Washington A. A. show down the Potomac. In place of a pair of battlers scaling 160 or less, who usually supply the action on boxing cards hereabouts, the Army post offers Jack Denning, of Norfolk, all-Navy heavyweight champion, against Arthur Huttick, of New York, former national light heavyweight amateur champion.

Denning is picked to win by those supposed to know their fights and fighters, this despite the fact that Huttick has been gaining plenty of experience in New York rings since he quit the amateur ranks two years ago.

According to an announcement of last Saturday Denning will hold a 5-pound weight advantage, his weight being stated as 187 to 182 for Huttick. The latter, however, overcame a similar handicap last Thursday when he outpointed Benny Edell in Madison Square Garden.

The introduction of heavyweights is figured to stimulate interest among local fistic followers, for it seems to be evidenced throughout the country that the big boys are the best drawing cards.

Three bouts constitute the supporting card with Eddie Buell, popular Washington bantamweight, meeting Sailor Landers, Virginia National Guard champion, in the semifinal of eight rounds. Buell will be making his initial appearance in the ring since last summer when he showed to advantage in three of the Fort's shows. His opponent tonight is said to be a terrific puncher for a little man, which, if true, will mean that Buell will have to make full use of his clever defense. It is questionable that Buell, a veteran, can still slug his way to victory as he used to do several years back.

Goldsby to Meet Green.

In the main preliminary of eight rounds George Goldsby, Third Corps Area welterweight champion, will engage Harry Green, an ambitious boxer of Fort Washington. Green will be tickled pink if he can stop the Fort Hoisbird boy, because he thought he was going to beat him earlier in the year in the Third Corps Area tournament, only to miss his opportunity by sustaining an injury in training.

The opener of six rounds brings together Roddy Davis, Eastern High School lightweight, and Soldier Clark, of the Fort.

Free transportation to the fights is offered by the management, a boat being scheduled to leave Washington Barracks wharf promptly at 7 o'clock. The first bout will start at 8:30.

RESULTS OF GOLF EVENTS IN CAPITAL

The first round in the Chevy Chase Club handicap is scheduled for today. Eighteen holes will be played today and the same number on the succeeding three days, seventy-two holes, medal play. This event has been won during the past two years by C. Ashmead Fuller.

On the Columbia course the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association will hold a tournament and at Indian Spring there will be miniture tournaments this morning under the auspices of the Women's District Golf Association. Play will commence at 8:30 o'clock, and the principal prize will be a cup donated by Mrs. J. F Gross.

The final round in the two-man team championship now in progress at the Manor Club will be played next Sunday between D. L. Thomson and Ray F. Garrity against J. R. Pattison and Mack Myers. In the semifinal round yesterday Thomson and Gharrity defeated C. W. Schaefer and S. T. Smith, 6—5, and Pattison and Myers defeated Winship I. Green and E. M. McClelland, 4—3.

In the qualification of the Manor Club tournament last week there was a tie for low net at 84 between E. A. Merkle, Indian Spring, and Ray Esher, Beaver Dam. They played off yesterday but ended their eighteen holes with another tie. Another round will be played tomorrow afternoon.

Father of Tennising Yeomans Plays Today

Clifton Yeomans, father of Ed and Clyde Yeomans, local tennis stars, will do a bit of playing on his own this afternoon when he engages Vincent Cross in the final round of the Navy Department tournament, to be played at the Monument courts at 3 o'clock.

The match will be a replica of last year's engagement for possession when Yeomans and Cross led their respective round robin divisions with a record of seven wins and no losses. Yeomans holds a leg on the trophy by virtue of last year's win, and is something of a favorite to turn the trick tomorrow.

Richard S Tennyson, donor of the cup, will present it to the winner.

VA. POLOISTS TRIUMPH IN FINALS

Fauquier-Loudon in 6-5 Victory Over Marylanders.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., June 21—The Fauquier-Loudoun riders, of Middleburg, Va., today won the first leg on the T. Dudley Riggs, jr., memorial polo cup by defeating the Maryland Polo Club Whites at Stevenson. The score was 6 to 5, the Marylanders earning three goals and having two as a handicap.

After victory had been won and lost the victorious four-William P. Hulbert, capt., and back; Baldwin D. Spilman, jr., No. 3; J. H. (Jock) Whitney, No. 2 and Richard Kirkpatrick, No. 1, dismounted and met in the center of the field to receive the trophy and a small replica of it for each member of the team.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Riggs and Capt. Hulbert expressed the sentiments of the team on receiving so handsome a trophy to be retained for one year by his club and for the individual cups.

Virginians Won Three Matches.

Fauquier-Loudoun went through the tournament by winning three matches defeating the Third Cavalry Yellows, the War Department and the Maryland Whites. They scored rather easy victories over the first two, but had a much harder match in capturing the championship.

The title game hung in the balance until the final bell was rung by Timer O'Reilly, Maryland, with it's two goal handicap, was unable to score in the first chukker, and Virginia also was held scoreless. The visitors measured the goal twice in the second and Maryland got one. Each four scored in the third and the teams closed the half with Maryland having a 4 to 3 edge. Virginia made it 4 all in the fourth chukker and went ahead 6 to 4 in the fifth chukker. With a little luck courting them the Whites should have scored earlier in the sixth chukker but the fifth goal came too late for another one to be made to tie up the count at 6-all.

Lt. C. N. McFarland, back, scored all three goals for Maryland

BURKE TO OPPOSE CLEVELAND TODAY

of crutches to enable him to get about while his strained left ankle is healing, will leave tomorrow for his home at Beloit, Wis. The Nats will have to worry along without him at Detroit, but he hopes to show up for the Chicago set.

Third Baseman Ossie Bluege was stiff and sore from a bad cold, but started in today's game, nevertheless.

Falk Makes Fine Catch.

Falk backed up against the wall in right in the first to take Manush's drive at arm's length over his head. After Cronin doubled, Hodapp made a leaping gloved hand catch to rob Harris of a hit and the Nats of a run.

Cronin made a nice play in nailing Averill trying to steal home in the first. He took Spencer's low throw on a one-hand pick-up.

Two great plays made the first two Indian outs in the second. Cronin went to the grass back of Bluege to take Morgan's bad bounder and toss him out, while Manush came in fast to take Vosmik's liner.

Bluege stumbled while rounding second on Spencer's single in the fourth and just managed to scamper back to second. But for falling over this match which some one carelessly dropped, he would have gotten to third easily.

Crowder intentionally walked Kamin to fill the bases with one out in the fourth.

Round six was the first in which the Nats did not get at least one man on the base paths.

Crowder's inability to bunt after Spencer led off with a single in the seventh did not help his cause any. After failing twice, he hit into a double play.

Opening the eighth Manush drove one a mile over the right field wall, but a breeze blowing that way carried the ball foul only a matter of a few feet. Fans thought this blow had tied the score when the ball left the bat.

THE Dixie Pigs swamped Congress Heights, 32 to 10, on the latter's diamond yesterday to run their Capital City League winning streak to seven straight and approach a step closer to the title inn Section A. St. Joseph's routed Ciro's Villagers, 18 to 1, to retain its mathematical chance of winning the crown, while Columbia Heights was forced to battle ten innings before subduing the Griffith-Blue Coal Team, 4 to 3.

The Pigs drove out 34 hits in winning the weird fray. Six of these blows flew from the bat of Ed Radtke, who numbered among his efforts a pair of triples and a home run. The high mark of the leaders' attack was in the fifth inning, when they crossed the scoring block eleven times. The victory was a costly one, however, as Left Fielder Watt tore a ligament in his leg in the sixth inning and was forced to leave the game.

Magee of St. Joes
In Fine Slab Feat.

Bob Magee, of St. Joseph's, almost had a no-hit, no-run game against the Villagers yesterday. Not until the seventh, when Bernie Fitzgerald lined out a single, was a safe blow garnered off the stocky hurler's delivery. Two additional hits in the ninth gave the losers their only tally of the game. "Bucky" Buscher, with five hits in six trips, led the Saints at bat.

The Griffith-Blue Coals made a gallant stand in their battle with the Columbians. The Coalmen tied the score at 3-to-3 in the seventh, and then proceeded to hold their more powerful opponents until the final tenth, when Jakie Lewis scampered across with the winning mark.

CAPITOL HEIGHTS regained its position as undisputed leader in Section B of the unlimited class of the Capital City League by turning back the Army Medicos, 4-1, on the Walter Reed diamond yesterday, while the Saks Clothiers were idling. The Majestic Radios gained third place in the standings with a 7-6 win over Foxall.

Ed Hutchinson, after taking "French leave" of his mates, was back in Capital Heights livery yesterday, and he set the Soldiers down with a paltry three hits. In addition, he banged out a triple to aid in his team's scoring. Until the seventh inning the Sawbones held a 1-0 lead over their rivals, but a rally in their half of this frame netted the victors the winning markers. Shropshire, although allowing ten hits, was effective until the seventh, when he wilted.

The Radiomen scored five runs in the first inning of hteir game with Foxall to give them a lead which the losers were never able to overcome. Benny Jenkins, of the Majestics, and Haskell and Trilling, of Foxall, connected for circuit clouts. Frank Di Nenna, although hit hard, managed to tighten in the pinches to avert defeat.

HOW IT BEGAN

By Russ Murphy and Roy Sernesky

MATRIMONIAL BUREAUS
THE BABYLONIANS ARE SAID TO HAVE BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR THE IDEA OF MATRIMONIAL BUREAUS. EACH YEAR THEY ASSEMBLED ALL MARRIAGEABLE GIRLS BEFORE THE TEMPLE AND AUCTIONED THEM OFF. THE MONEY SO RECEIVED WAS TURNED OVER TO THE LESS ATTRACTIVE ONES.

ASBESTOS

ASBESTOS IS SAID TO HAVE BEEN DISCOVERED BY THE ANCIENT GREEKS WHO WOVE IT INTO HANDKERCHIEFS AND TABLECLOTHS. WHEN THEIR TABLECLOTHS BECAME SOILED THEY MERELY THREW THEM INTO THE FIRE AND BURNED THE DIRT OFF.

DIGITS

THE ANCIENTS USED THEIR FINGERS FOR COUNTING AND BECAUSE OF THIS HABIT THE LATINS APPLIED THEIR WORD "DIGITUS," MEANING FINGER, TO THE FIRST NINE NUMERALS. WE'VE FOLLOWED THE PRACTISE.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

TO MAKE FUMIGATION SAFE.

THERE is a disposition on the part of city councils and State Legislatures to stop the use of hydrocyanic acid for fumigating purposes. The casualties are so numerous and the accidents so spectacular that one does not wonder at the action of the legislative bodies. But in spite of the waves of popular indignation, the fear excited by newspaper publicity, and the acts passed by Legislatures, hydrocyanic fumigation continues. The method is so superior to any other that it will continue in use in spite of everything until a better method is found.

For fumigating tobacco, fruits and vegetables, grain and flour, and for killing rats, mice, mosquitoes and bedbugs, hydrocyanic acid is in a class by itself. What is more, when the fumigating is done by trained, experienced men the danger is not exceptionally great. Foods that have been fumigated by it are entirely safe to eat, provided proper precautions have been taken.

Even water that has become saturated with it becomes safe in time. It can be used in ships and houses without endangering the occupants, or those in adjacent houses, or the people on the street. All is in knowing how and in applying what is known. Legislatures—State and local—might very well regulate such fumigation by licensing fumigators and basing the license upon a showing of qualifications by specifying the kinds of material used (for the chemical is put up in different forms), and by approving certain methods and prohibiting others. That kind of legislation would be helpful and could be enforced.

Dr. C. L. Williams, of the United States Public Health Service, recently gave an informing lecture on fumigation before the New York Police School. Most of the lecture was devoted to hydrocyanic fumigation. A part that is of interest to the general public dealt with the treatment of persons made unconscious by the gas. Hydrocyanic acid first affects the center of consciousness. It next affects the breathing center, and, after that, the heart center.

Because a poisoned person is unconscious it does not follow that he must die. Nor is death inevitable if breathing has stopped. Not until the heart ceases to beat is hope of revival given up. Therefore the first thing to do when a person is poisoned is to get him into fresh air. If he is unconscious he must be dragged or carried out and that quickly.

Throwing open the windows and blowing out the room is a waste of precious time. If the unconscious man is breathing he will probably recover and nothing need be done. If breathing has stopped, or if it is very irregular and ineffective, artificial respiration must be done. This should be kept up as long as the heart beats. If it is quite certain that the heart is no longer beating nothing that can be done will avail. No medicine of any sort is of service.

HEART SYMPTOMS.

Mrs. J. K. writes:

1. I would like to know the symptoms of degenerating heart.

2. Also, the symptoms of an infected heart.

3. Is there pain with either one?

REPLY.

1. This term is not in common use. My guess is that the reference is to failing compensation due to myocarditis or muscle degeneration. The symptoms of this are: Shortness of breath, asthma, rapid pulse, swelling of feet.

2. This term is not in common use. You may mean bacterial endocarditis. If so, the symptons are: Rapid, weak pulse, heart murmurs, shortness of breath, emboli, bacteria in the blood.

3. There may be pain with either, especially the former. However, it is not usually present. Pain on exertion in myocarditis is not rare.

HUNDREDS HONOR ARLINGTON PRIEST

Father Curran, Ceebrating Silver Jubilee, Paid Warm Tribute.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The Rev. John A. Curran, pastor of St. Charles Catholic Church, celebrated his silver jubilee with solemn high mass yesterday morning in the presence of a capacity congregation.

A large delegation from Harpers Ferry, where Father Curran was pastor for more than eighteen years, attended the services. Mgr. Alfred E. Smith, editor of the Baltimore Catholic Review, a life-long friend and classmate, preached the sermon. Special music was furnished by the choir under direction of Mrs. Albert Cyr.

Gathered in the auditorium of St. Charles School, members of St. Charles of Clarendon and St. Agnes Catholic Church in Cherrydale, together with a host of his non-Catholic friends throughout the county, numbering more than 500 persons last night tendered a reception to Father Curran.

The exercises opened with the address of welcome by the Rev. Thomas J. Healy, assistant pastor at St. Charles Church. He read a letter from the Right Rev. A. J. Brennan, Bishop of Richmond, Va., who expressed regret at not being able to be present.

Mgr. Smith, the principal speaker, in paying tribute to Father Curran, said, "It is said to know a man you must live with him, I have lived with him in sincere friendship for 50 years and the esteem and affection that was generated 50 years ago has grown with the years.

"I attended St. Mary's Seminary with him as his classmate. I preached his first mass in 1906 and I know of no greater pleasure that could be mine than to stand here before you tonight and voice his praises to the housetops.

"You are to be congratulated on having such a sincere man in your midst, one who always will be ready to answer the call of those in need."

Other speakers were Louis C. Carl, president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce; Mgr. J. F. Kaup, of Richmond, and State Senator Frank L. Ball.

The program concluded vocal solos by Master Norman DeMeza and Mr. McGover. As a token of esteem a purse was presented on behalf of members of the church by A. A. Moore, chairman of a committee. Father Curran expressed sincere thanks and expressed the hope he might live up praise showered on him.

Music was furnished by the Glee Club of the Chesapeake & Potomas Telephone Co. with Prof. Gumprecuht, organist at Holy Trinity Catholic Church, Washington, at the piano.

West Virginia Wheat Ready to Cut Friday

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 21.—Wheat harvest will be under way in the eastern Panhandle by Friday, farmers today agreed. Wheat has ripened with unexpected speed the last week, changing prospects for a later grain-cutting season.

A bumper crop is in prospect. Straw is long, heads unusually long, and as a rule exceptionally well filled. This is the second successive good wheat yield in the Panhandle. From present indications, the average per acre should be close to 20 bushels in Berkeley and Jefferson, the two chief wheat-producing counties, both of the panhandle and the entire State.

So great has been interest shown in the round table on "Law Enforcement," to be conducted by Dr. Raymond Moley, professor of public law in Columbia University, that Dr. Charles G. Maphis, director of the institute, has decided to move this discussion group from Monroe Hall to the Cabell Hall auditorium and to invite the general public to attend all sessions.

"Do the Police Really Protect the Public?" is the question to be asked at the open meeting by Bruce Smith, of the National Institute of Public Administration at the initial meeting Monday morning, June 29.

First-hand information on what is being done to wipe out the racketeer in New York and Chicago will be told by two of the men best fitted to discuss the question, "Is the Racket a Menace?" Tuesday. These men are George C. Medalie, United States district attorney for the Eastern district of New York, and Col. Robert Isham Randolph, who has been one of the major forces in assisting the "untouchables" in their successful Chicago campaign.

Liquor control and the Wickersham commission will be discused Wednesday morning by James W. Wadsworth, former United States Senator from New York, representing the wets, and Oliver W. Stewart, of New York, vice president of the new allied dry forces.

Present at the discussion, though not on the program, will be Mrs. Ella Boole, national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and Mrs. Carroll Miller, spokesman for the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform. These leaders of wet and dry forces will debate prohibition in a public meeting Tuesday night, June 30, in the McIntire Amphitheater.

Woodcock to Speak July 2.

"Rewriting the Criminal Law" is the topic for the closing session Friday morning. Speakers are to be Judge Johan Goldstein, of New York, who will talk on problems of magistrate's courts in a large city, and Dr. John B. Waite, of the law school of the University of Michigan.

General discussion will follow the set addresses each morning. The right to ask and to answer questions will probably be limited to members of the institute, but Dr. Maphis is inviting all who are interested in topics to be considered to attend these meetings.

MEDALS ARE GIVEN 1,800 BOY SCOUTS

Third Annual Jamboree for Region Is Completed; Members Depart.

Medals and merit badges were awarded the 1,800 Scouts yesterday morning at the close of their three-day encampment in Rock Creek Park. All the Scouts received merit badges for their camping skill and various patrols were awarded emblems for their skill in various branches of scouting.

The third annual region jamboree, as the convention is called, started Friday when the scouts arrived in the city, and the afternoon and evening of the first day were spent in getting acquainted and becoming acclimated to their surroundings.

Saturday, the boys, under the leadership of Maj. R. F. Seymour, gathered in Arlington National Cemetery, where they placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. After the exercises, the Scouts were conducted on a tour of the city, which included the Capitol, Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument and the National Museum.

After lunch at Camp Good Will in Rock Creek Park, the boys visited the zoo and at 5 o'clock held a regional review before a committee of Government and military officials.

As the sun sank below the horizon and the shadows of light started to creep overhead, the large camp fire was lighted and the boys gathered around, singing and laughing. Entertainment was provided until 10 o'clock, when taps was sounded and they retired to their individual camp sites.

Yesterday morning after the Scouts had packed their knapsacks and finished saying their good-bys, they could be seen leaving the city in buses, automobiles and trains, homeward bound, with smiles on their faces, but somewhat wistful because of the fact that their stay was not longer.

FALLS CHURCH ASKS WATER BIDS JULY 2

Work Must Start by July 15 and Be Completed by October 15.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

Falls Church Town Council has adopted plans for the new town water system and voted to call for bids for constructing the system July 2.

Action was taken at a special meeting of the council by adoption of a report submitted by the special water committee, consisting of Councilman Charles E. Gage, J. V. Turner and Frank L. Birch, and the citizens' advisory committee, members of which are J. L. Harrison, Harry Keyser, Carroll V. Shrere and E. H. Rosengarten. Competitive bids are to be returnable on July 2. The successful bidder will be required to start work not later than July 15 and the work must be completed not later than October 15, it was ruled.

Report of the special committee contains plans and detailed specifications for a system worked out by the engineer subcommittee and the staff of the McCrary Engineering Co. Distribution of water will be through a grid system, composed of 12 miles of 6 and 8 inch mains and 95 fire hydrants. Water will be supplied to the mains from deep wells and a 200,000-gallon emergency storage tank. A connection is to be made with the Arlington County water system for emergency use and until the town wells are completed.

The report indicates that the town will be able to furnish its own supply from wells at approximately 10 cents per 1,000 gallons. The committee reviewed negotiations with Arlington County officials and failure to secure water through the Arlington County mains for less than 30 cents per 1,000 gallons. To insure adequate fire protection and make possible reduced fire insurance rates no mains less than 6 inches will be laid, so as to meet requirement of the board of fire underwriters.

The council rejected an offer to install the system on a basis of a guaranteed estimate of cost to include specified items and providing for participation by engineers in any savings. It decided to obtain direct bids on tanks, fire hydrants and valves. The call for bids will cover furnishing and laying mains and pipes and setting fire hydrants.

Two bids have been received for sinking the town's first well in the rear of the council hall. They were referred to the water committee for recommendations and Mayor L. P. Daniel was authorized to close the contract in accordance with such recommendations.

The council announced that the present water mains in the Arlington county portion of the town will be taken over as soon as an accounting can be made in conjunction with Arlington county officials to determine actual cost of installation. The town plans to refund these payments to property owners and this settlement will be made as soon as the town receives the money for its $125,000 bond issue, which will be available prior to the council meeting July 3.

The council concurred in recommendation of the water committee that the same rate for 1,000 gallons be charged in Falls Church as in Arlington county but that a lower minimum gallonage be established so that persons who do not use 40,000 gallons per year will not be required to pay for more than they use.

Details of rates and administration of the system have been referred to the council's finance committee for study. It is stated that water will be available for service as rapidly as new sections of the mains are installed. Machinery for prompt handling of applications for service will be set up at once.

The council voted to make charges for connection, including tapping the main, installing the meter and delivery to the property line, as low as possible, eliminating any margin of profit to the town from this source in order to encourage as many residents as possible to become water users.
